Navy Speeds Reopening Of Kearny Shipyard

Full Operations Expected to Be Resumed at Seized Plant Tomorrow

By International News Service

Kearny, N. J., Aug. 24.—The United States Navy, acting on an executive order issued Saturday by President Roosevelt, today took over the strike-bound Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. plant at Kearny to end the 18-day strike and to resume work on $493,000,000 of defense orders.

First steps in reopening the huge shipyard will take place at 8 a. m. tomorrow when all the yard's superintendents, department heads, foremen and subforemen will report for a conference with Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, now in charge of the plant. Full operations are expected to be resumed Tuesday morning.

This afternoon at 2:30, Assistant Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal, Rear Admiral Bowen and a group of Navy officers arrived at the yards. They went to the administration building, where they were joined by L. H. Korndorff, president of the company.

Labor leaders representing the 17,000 striking workers waited at the yard entrance as the Navy officials and the management conferred. Shortly before 6 o'clock the labor leaders were called in to join the conference.

Admiral Bowen's Statement

At 6:30, as the conference adjourned, Admiral Bowen issued this statement:

"First steps toward reopening the plant of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. will be taken at 8 a. m., August 25, when superintendents, department heads, foremen, assistant foremen and subforemen will report to complete plans for operation. Further steps in the resumption of work at this plant will be announced subsequently in the press and over the radio. It is expected that the plant will resume full operation beginning with the day shift at 7:30 a. m., on Tuesday, August 26."

Present at the conference, representing the Government, in addition to Admiral Bowen and Undersecretary Forrestal, were Capt. N. D. Farwell, Capt. J. M. Irish, Comdr. O. D. Foutch, Lieut. Comdr G. A. Holderness, Lieut. L. M. Comen and Lieut. W. Starbeck.

Civilian representatives of the Government included Daniel S. Ring, labor relations director of the President Grants Right for Oil Line To Eastern Area

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 24 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt acted today to help relieve gasoline shortage on the Eastern Seaboard by signing a proclamation delegating the right of eminent domain to a private company for construction of a pipeline from Louisiana's oil fields.

Mr. Roosevelt's proclamation gives the Plantation Pipeline Co., eminent domain in acquiring a pipeline right of way between Baton Rouge, La., and Greensboro, N. C. Projected originally to deliver 32,000 barrels of oil daily to its terminus, the line since has been redesigned to deliver first 48,000 barrels daily, and finally 60,000 barrels.

If devoted solely to transport of gasoline, it was estimated, the base capacity of the life would deliver more than enough fuel to meet half the consumption requirements of Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas.

U. S. Makes Too Few Planes Because It Made No Plans

Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post

THE Air Corps of the United States Army is not now ready for combat against a major foe.

It will not be ready until some time in the spring or early summer of 1942.

Even then the Air Corps will not be adequate. The spring or summer of 1942 merely will witness completion of the first stage of building America into a real air power.

Col. Robert Olds, veteran Army flier, recently disclosed in a magazine article that the Air Corps would have a force only half the present size of Germany's Luftwaffe even when the current expansion program is completed. The Luftwaffe—at least before the start of the Russian campaign—was credited with having more than a million officers and men.

Such is the picture in the United States today, nearly two years after Hitler unleashed his aerial might against Poland, 15 months after President Roosevelt called for "50,000 military and naval planes," and slightly less than a year after the President was declaring in campaign speeches that the defense program was making "rapid progress."

WHAT is the reason for this situation in a land that boasts of being the birthplace of aviation? Is it to be found in the diversion of planes to Britain, Russia and China? Men who ought to know say that is only part of the answer.

Sending of Aid To Others Not Whole Cause

Actually, if it had not been for British and French aircraft orders back in 1938 and 1939, the United States would be far worse off than it is today, particularly with respect to engines. Those Anglo-French orders gave the first impetus to expansion of aircraft plants in the United States.

When France fell in June, 1940, and America began to arouse herself, the aircraft industry was in the position of a humming bird that is asked to lay an ostrich egg. An avalanche of orders descended on the industry. Today more than 80,000 war planes are "on order" for the Army, Navy and Great Britain.

The rate at which the Army's share of these planes will come into service may be judged from a statement made at the outset: That the Air Corps will not reach the first stage of adequacy until the spring or early summer of 1942.

THE reasons for this situation, as given by men who are too familiar with it to have their opinions challenged, are summed up as follows:

A year ago there was no general plan of any sort for building up American air power. No man or group of men was given authority to develop a general plan.

Nobody seemed to know just what the Army Air Corps was supposed to defend, whether it was the United States, the whole Western Hemisphere, the Atlantic and the Pacific—or whether it was expected to fight abroad.

Planning Was For Too Little, Too Leisurely

In the political campaign of 1940, the people were told that the preparedness program would not interfere with their normal life, and in consequence a war economy was superimposed on a luxury economy.

Those in responsible posts planned too little and too leisurely. They forgot that first things had to come first, and that the Nation would have to build up an enormous tool capacity before it could get anywhere.

IN THE meantime a lot of nonsense was printed and uttered about converting automobile factories into plane factories overnight. They can be converted, and are going to be converted, but it is not a job to be done overnight. There is as much difference between an automobile and a warplane as there is between a thermometer and an alarm clock. At any rate, no American automobile factory has yet produced a warplane.

Then there was the ghastly error of trying to speed up production of planes and arms in general by creating a "tower of committees." New committees were created, but no attempt was made to disband committees that had failed; this for the sake of face-saving. There were too many committees and there was too little planning.

President Roosevelt, in the opinion of many aviation experts, failed to delegate authority to those who should have been planning on a large scale for tools, aluminum and other raw materials. Today, as a consequence, the defense effort is suffering from a severe lack of all these things which should have been ordered a year ago.

Behind all this is the state of mind that existed in the United States for many years. The people were encouraged to believe, for example, that the Atlantic Ocean was an impregnable defense, whereas the airman was regarding it merely as a watery area containing salt and fish which could easily be spanned by war planes.

A MAJOR error in creating American air power has been a system which is based on dollars instead of on tanks or objectives.

Thus, in March, 1940, the Air Corps asked Congress for 1400 combat planes. The House Appropriations Committee gave it enough dollars to purchase only 57. The Senate, in a more lavish mood, boosted the number to 186.

That, as has been said, was in March, 1940. Three weeks later the period of "phoney war" ended abruptly; Hitler sent his legions storming

Hundreds Take to Bicycling As Gasoline Supply Dwindles

Scenes reminiscent of the "gay 90's" are being revived in Washington through the government's edict on conservation of gasoline.

The almost forgotten picture of dignified men and women astride a bicycle soon will become a familiar sight here. Hundreds of persons, it was learned, faced with the threat of gasolineless days, have bought bicycles here to assure themselves that they will not be wanting for transportation in the future.

This information comes from Gus Romm, who conducts Washington's oldest bicycle shop, 735 Ninth Street Northwest. Romm said he was now selling scores of bicycles to Washingtonians, most of them Government workers.

Romm said he had received from a Chicago factory 1,000 new bicycles and expected to dispose of them immediately. He predicted that by the end of November the supply of bicycles would be exhausted at the factories and that he would not be able to get any more. The reason, he said, was because material used in manufacture of bicycles is needed by the Government in its program of national defense.

"I have been in the bicycle business since 1912," he said, "and I have never known such a boom as at present. Since the edict of Secretary Ickes on conservation of gasoline, I have sold about 300 bicycles. Most of my customers have been Government workers—men and women. Many of them are now commuting from nearby Virginia. They told me that they were not going to take any chances on being caught without transportation and they

Whole Front Aflame

By the Associated Press

Moscow, (Monday), Aug. 25.—Mammoth tank battles raged today along the approaches to Leningrad and on the central front before Moscow, where stiffening Red Army defenders reported destroying 135 tanks and routing a Nazi infantry division over a battlefield literally carpeted with German dead.

On the Leningrad front slow, heavy Soviet steel behemoths were ramming, burning and shooting aside the Germans in a mighty defensive effort while on the central front forces of Soviet Gen. Konev were declared continuing a counter-thrust through the debris of shattered German tanks and armored vehicles.

Two Transports Reported Sunk

The latest communique said Soviet troops were heavily engaged along the entire front and were putting up particularly stubborn resistance in the Kakisalmi area on the shores of Lake Ladoga north of Leningrad; in the Smolensk and Gomel directions before Moscow; and in the direction of Dnieperopetrovsk.

The mention of Dnieperopetrovsk was first official admission that fighting had reached the vicinity of that great hydro-electric power and industrial center on the Dnieper River.

The Baltic Sea fleet was reported to have sunk two enemy transports and in air fights Friday and Saturday the communique said 52 German and 39 Russian planes were destroyed.

A front-line dispatch to the army newspaper Red Star said that after routing the German infantry division Gen. Konev's troops smashed German tank and motorized reinforcements thrown into the battle.

More than 100 German cars and armored vehicles, many guns and huge ammunition supplies were reported destroyed by the Russians.

English Legation In Persia Looks For Final Note 'Momentarily'

By the Associated Press

Teheran, Iran, Aug. 23 (Delayed).—An ultimatum to the Iran Government is expected from London momentarily, the British Legation said today as tension over the continued presence of German specialists in this country grew near to the snapping point.

Slightly easing the gravity of the situation with respect to Soviet Russia, however, the Iran army was reported by Soviet sources to have withdrawn 12 miles from the frontier in the Caucasus as a token of good faith in the desire to avoid complicating border incidents.

No similar withdrawal was reported, however, from the Iraq and Baluchistan borders, whence British troops might be expected should the dispute break into open warfare.

Iran Avoids Provocation

The Iran government was making every effort to assure the defense of its independence, officials said, but they manifestly were making anxious efforts to avoid provocation of foreign powers.

However, Iran's latest reply to the British-Russian demands for the expulsion of Germans was reliably reported to have been a stand pat statement that Iran as a sovereign nation would decide what foreigners to expel.

The country long since has adopted a policy of eliminating foreign residents who are objectionable, regardless of their nationality, the note was reported to have contended.

(British sources in London yesterday said Iran's reply was being studied. There were indications it had been found unsatisfactory. The British said there was not likely to be any announcement concerning Iran's reply over the weekend, a possible indication that they were awaiting Iran's reaction to further steps which have been taken in the dispute.)

Doubt Chance of Sabotage

The Nazis objected to are employes of the government in key services and industries, but Iran's attitude toward the British-Russian demands is that only small-scale sabotage at the most is possible if the Germans are allowed to remain.

The Iranians contend that because of the strictest police control, reports from abroad of German plotting to stage a coup d'etat, as in Iraq, are absurd, and declare that such reports never have been substantiated.

'Informal Social Event'

Roosevelt, Duke to Be Here Today After Hyde Park Visit

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 24.—President Roosevelt and his royal house guest from England, the Duke of Kent, enjoyed a quiet Sabbath today inspecting an art exhibit and taking two automobile rides through the rolling countryside.

Members of the Presidential party were in almost complete agreement that the visit of the youngest brother of England's King at the Roosevelt home was nothing more than what Mr. Roosevelt had said it would be—an informal social event.

Traveling with the President, the Duke will arrive in Washington tomorrow, will fly to Norfolk, Va., to inspect naval repair facilities there, and will return to the Capital in time for dinner, spending the night at the White House.

Though the get-together of the Chief Executive and a member of the family which rules Britain did emphasize the closeness of the friendship between their countries, some authorities pointed out that the Duke of Kent had no power to reach any sort of understanding with the President on international affairs.

London, Aug. 24.—With the bluntest words ever used in recent years by a British Statesman to Japan, Prime Minister Churchill warned the Nippon government that in the event of trouble in the Far East "we shall, of course, range ourselves unhesitatingly on the side of the United States." Japanese aggression "has got to stop," he said.

His radio speech confirmed what many people here already had suspected—that the United States and Britain had decided to take the strongest sort of line with the Japanese but at the same time had agreed to hold out every hope to Japan which would keep that country from trying to create any further diversion in the East.

The conclusion is obvious that the United States and Britain have decided that the real theater of the war is in the Atlantic and in Europe and that Hitler has cast Japan for the role of trying to divert the United States' interest from Britain and the threat to her.

"They Menace Singapore"

Churchill, after reciting again the Nazi outrages in Europe, turned to the Far East. There, he said, "for five long years the Japanese military factions, seeking to emulate the style of Hitler and Mussolini, have been invading and harrying the 500 million inhabitants of China."

"The Japanese armies have been wandering about that vast land in futile excursions," he added, "carrying with them carnage, ruin and

Aboard President's Special Train en route to Washington, Aug. 24.—That the President is prepared to go the limit to attain his end of aiding Britain in the defeat of the Nazis, was made clear today by his signing an Executive order authorizing employment of alien masters and crews where necessary on American flag ships, and suspension of the standards heretofore in force with regard to crew quarters on vessels operating under jurisdiction of the Maritime Commission.

William D. Hassett, Presidential secretary, explained in answer to questions that "the effect of this" would be to permit British officers and crews to serve on American vessels.

The President acted under Section 5 of the act of Congress of July 6, 1941, authorizing operation of American ships seized from Germany, Italy and Nazi-occupied countries. His action made possible uses of the ships by the British without their transfer from American control.

Although there was no evidence that the Executive would so employ his authority, the order also made possible employment of alien crews on other American vessels, in case this proved necessary.

Hassett understood the order would apply to any ships under the

Paris Saboteurs Challenge Nazi Death Threats

German Soldiers Hurt in Auto Trap,; Hostages May Pay

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Aug. 24.—Representatives of the French government in German-occupied Paris said tonight there had been five acts of sabotage against railways in the Paris area alone in the last two weeks.

The statement by Fernand de Brinon, the Vichy government's Paris representative, came shortly after Pierre Pucheu, as minister of interior, charged that Communist disorders were planned to paralyze the government by provoking German reprisals.

Only a few hours before, advices were received from Paris that some Germans in an auto were injured in a trap set for them in the Paris suburb of Puteau—the first challenge to the German army to carry out its threat of shooting hostages for such acts. The terrorists escaped.

In a statement regarding the disorders de Briuon said the railroad sabotage occurred in suburbs, most of which are inhabited by workers, within the last two weeks. He appealed particularly to railroad workers not to endanger "thousands of lives" by sabotage.

Paris reports said the car carrying the Germans was smashed last night when it sped into a cable stretched across a street at night in Puteau, one of the "red ring" of working class suburbs about the German-occupied capital.

Reports from occupied France said guards had been drafted among the civilian population to protect

Elliott Roosevelt Wins Kiss With Speech in Pub

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 24.—Capt. Elliott Roosevelt dropped into a Wapping Wharf pub Friday night, quaffed ale with London East Enders and planted a resounding kiss upon the cheek of 60-year-old "Auntie" Sue Cunningham, one of the establishment's regulars.

It was during a tour of bombed ruins along the Thames that the President's son made his impromptu call. Quickly the crowd of dockwallopers recognized him and the piano player swung into a rendition of "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones."

Roosevelt joined the house in singing lusty American songs and then the cry went up "Speech! Speech!" Responding he said:

"We shall be with you at the finish and all the time. You are getting stronger and stronger. We are doing our best."

Then along toward the shank of the evening Auntie Sue made bold and blurted:

"Gosh, I'd like to kiss you, sir, but I suppose I musn't."

"Go right ahead," Roosevelt replied, and Auntie did. She put her arms around his neck and she got what all agreed was "a real smacker."

A Promise Kept

Draft Boards Told to Help Freed Selectees to Find Jobs

Draft officials throughout the Nation were told yesterday "to make certain" that citizen soldiers about to be released from military duty are "protected in their legal right to reemployment in civilian occupations."

In an order by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, State draft headquarters were instructed "to complete speedily all necessary arrangements for their local boards to aid in the reemployment program."

National Selective Service headquarters, Hershey said, has planned that each local draft board should appoint a reemployment committeeman to see that the returning soldiers get their old jobs back, or get new ones if the old are for some legal reason unavailable.

The Army announced last week that barring any change for the worse in the international situation, approximately 200,000 men would be out of uniform by Christmas. They will include men over 28 years of age, men on whom military service is a demonstrable economic hardship, and married men. The exodus will start September 1.

Hershey said that under the Selective Service law these men must be given back their jobs in private industry or business "unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so."

The job of the local reemployment committeeman will be to get in touch with the former employer prior to return of the soldier; to ascertain whether the former job is still available; to transmit to the nearest State employment office the records of returning soldiers who have no jobs, and to act as liaison agent for the soldier in placing him in contact with available work.

Hershey said that the War Department was "distributing to the camps the necessary forms for obtaining the occupational and educational history of the soldiers, in order that adequate data may be available for connecting the men with suitable job openings."

"It is vital to the successful operation of the selective service system," Gen. Hershey declared, "that the men who have answered the call of their country to qualify themselves for its armed defense be protected in their legal right to reemployment in civilian occupations. It is not only a moral obligation of the selective service system to see that they are so protected, but it is also a responsibility imposed by law."

Reds Tell of Trapped Division Outwitting Foe, Fighting Free

By Cyrus L. Sulzberger

Moscow, Aug. 24.—This war has been replete with almost incredible stories of the adventures of guerrilla bands and isolated units fighting their way back to the main lines, but one of the most astonishing tales heard so far has just been given to your correspondent.

It is an account by an officer of a lost division which was cut off in western White Russia more than a month ago and which refused to submit despite constant German propaganda urging the Russian unit to surrender because all was lost. It managed during three weeks of intermittent combats to slash its way across the Nazi rear to the main lines of the Red army.

The division had been taking part in the general resistance to the initial German offensive in White Russia and after violent battles found that it had lost contact with its corps command.

Nazi planes circled overhead dropping carefully printed pamphlets. On one side was a map showing where the division was and how it was encircled. On the other was a demand of submission "in order to avoid useless bloodshed." The leaflet displayed a special pass which was supposed to admit the cut-off soldiers to the German lines without danger.

Taking advantage of the map, which showed exactly where the Nazi units were, the general began a series of actions which enabled his units to return and in which

25 Miles From Leningrad, Nazis Say

Rail Junction Taken, Germans Report City Almost Under Fire

By the United Press

Berlin, Aug. 24.—German assault troops have broken through a heavy concrete and steel defense line south of Leningrad, capturing a railroad center 25 miles from the city, and may soon lay down a devastating artillery barrage on the Soviet defenders, it was reported tonight.

An offical D. N. B. news agency dispatch said the Germans have penetrated the "strong and extensive" fortifications at several points and have stormed and disabled more than 100 bunkers. The defenses were described as of heaviest concrete construction.

On the Ukrainian front strong forces were said to be driving upon the industrial cities of Dneprodzerzhinsk, Dnieperopetrovsk and Zaporozhe along the mile-wide Dnieper River and mopping up "battered remnants" of the Red army within the river bend around Krivoi Rog and Nikopol.

It was reported the Germans had advanced to Krasnogvradeisk, only 25 miles south of Leningrad.

Report Rail Line Cut

A German propaganda ministry report from the Leningrad front told of fighting near Krasnogvradeisk, where Nazi infantry was said to have cut the main railroad line to Leningrad. This report, representing a 55-mile advance along the rail line from captured Kingisepp, lacked official confirmation, however.

The Russian air force was offering stiff resistance to the German advances, reports said, striking particularly intense blows south of Leningrad and farther west upon German forces attacking Tallinn, isolated capital of Estonia.

German units were said to have captured several military bridges of recent construction over an unidentified river south of Leningrad and gained the opposite bank, smashing Soviet resistance and inflicting heavy losses in men and materials.

The Russians have been fighting bitterly in Estonia, making counterattacks in efforts to regain lost towns and attempting to land reinforcements on the Estonian coast, D. N. B. said.

Say 5 Ships Were Sunk

German tanks and infantry destroyed the landing attempts on the Gulf of Finland, the agency said, and observers were said to have seen five Soviet ships strike mines and explode. There was no information how close the Germans were to Tallinn.

Important operations were reported on the south central sector between Kiev and Gomel, but all quarters were reticent regarding objectives and the progress being made.

German informed quarters tonight denied that the retreating Russians had blown up the great Zaporozhe power plant and also denied that the German radio had issued such a report.

(The German radio, heard by the United Press listening post in London, said that the Russian forces fleeing eastward across the Dnieper had blown up the great Zaporozhe Power Plant on the east bank, for which the Dnieperstroy Dam provides power.)

In its communique Sunday the high command told of strong advances in the Ukraine to the banks of the Dnieper—with Odessa still holding out under heavy siege and Kiev still in Russian hands.

Berlin Claims Sinking of 25 British Ships

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 24.—The German high command announced tonight that Nazi warships and U-boats had sunk 25 merchantmen, totaling 148,200 tons, including 21 freighters out of a single British convoy traveling from England to Gibraltar.

(The high command announcement was broadcast on the Berlin radio with great fanfare while Prime Minister Churchill was speaking on the British radio.)

The announcement said the 21 freighters were sunk by U-boats after several days' pursuit.

In addition, a destroyer of the Afridi class, a corvette and a guard boat also were sunk, the announcement said.

The high command declared only eight ships escaped to Portuguese territorial waters.

(Twenty-five survivors of a British freighter were landed at Lisbon, Portugal, from another British freighter Sunday. They declared several ships and a destroyer were reported sunk from a convoy attacked by a number of German submarines and bombers.)

A communique, dated Adolf Hitler's headquarters, follows:

"Submarines and warships operating in overseas waters report the destruction of 25 enemy merchant ships with tonnage of 148,200 gross tons.

"Of these, U-boats, alone, in several days' pursuit and after a hard fight, shot 21 merchantmen with a gross tonnage of 122,000 out of a convoy traveling from England toward Gibraltar.

"Additionally, they sank a destroyer of the Afridi class, a corvette and a guard boat from the protecting forces. Only eight ships of this strongly protected convoy succeeded in escaping into Portuguese territorial waters."

War Sidelights

Red Heckling Irks German Newscasters

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 24.—The German radio tonight bitterly attacked Russia for jamming its German language news transmissions by filling in pauses between news items with laconic heckling on the same wave lengths, and promised "fitting counter measures."

The "jamming" which, in its present form, represents a new idea in radio warfare, has been noticed by German listeners in Berlin for the past two weeks. At first only inarticulate noises could be heard each time the German speakers stopped for breath between items or sentences. Last night, however, for the first time listeners were able clearly to understand the words of the enemy speakers who, following news items would state, "a fairy tale," or "do you expect people to believe that?"

At the end of the news broadcast last night, when the German announcer had said, "this is the end of the news," the enemy speaker quickly added, "but tomorrow the lies will continue."

The German radio did not indicate what counter measures were envisaged. A precaution it took tonight, however, was virtually to eliminate the usual pauses between news items on the German language broadcasts and to overlap the beginning and ending of news transmission with military music, leaving no time for extraneous remarks.

Mystery Novels Banned

Rome, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Publication of mystery novels now will be strictly controlled in Italy because they are "harmful to Fascist youth."

A decree issued today by the ministry of popular culture said mystery books and magazines cannot be published without a previous authorization from the ministry. Numerous mystery books already have been ordered removed from circulation.

The bulk of the books sold in Italy are translations of the works of well-known American, British and French authors.

Red Troops Counterattack In Center

"fantastic torches" in the half-light of Sundays predawn.

Red airmen supporting the ground forces were credited with wrecking 35 of the German tanks, 43 cars, 6 armored vehicles and 15 guns.

Equally heavy fighting raged on the southeastern front where a Soviet cavalry regiment was reported to have thrown German units out of a town identified as "B" and captured a German division headquarters. This fighting although not specifically located, presumably was in the Dnieper bend.

On the Leningrad front, a dispatch to the government newspaper Izvestia said, crews fought like "real knights" of modern machines in the tank battles.

The morning communique acknowledged a new retreat by Red army forces defending Odessa, but said that the advancing Rumanians in this sector were forced to pay an enormous toll in men and machines.

The Fifth Rumanian Infantry Division alone was said to have lost 9000 men killed or wounded in five days of fighting against Soviet infantrymen, machine-gunners and flame-throwers in rear-guard actions supported by the Red air force.

Another Loses 7000

Another 7000 castualties was sustained by the Seventh Rumanian Infantry Division in a week, it added, while Sunday communiques said the Third Rumanian Infantry Division was smashed with the loss of 10,000 killed and wounded and that the Fifteenth Division had been routed.

The Germans concentrated their offensive about Kingisepp, shell-torn town 75-miles southwest of Leningrad which the Russians abandoned August 18. But for six days the Russian lines appeared to have held steady there.

Fighting also was reported heavy at Novgorod, 100 miles southwest of Leningrad.

The Russians said that Soviet troops on the central front and in besieged Odessa had smashed or routed three divisions in hammering counterattacks.

The Izvestia dispatch described one encounter of a Russian tank unit with a column of 40 German machines on the northern front.

The Red army tanks, spaced at large intervals in a triangle formation, formed an ambush in a forest near a highway. At dawn, two reconnoitering German tanks were destroyed by gunfire at 300 yards.

Populace Joining Battle

The remainder of the German column charged down the road and was dispersed by flanking fire, the dispatch said. Many Nazi tanks were reported wrecked.

In another encounter, the dispatch said, four Russian tanks destroyed 31 German tanks.

A dispatch to the Communist party organ Pravda from the city "N," one of the approaches to Leningrad, said the entire civilian population had taken up military work.

Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, commander in the Leningrad area, twice has appealed to civilians to dig in for a fight to the death. A people's army has erected barricades for street fighting and has been drilling in Leningrad.

A Tass dispatch said communications between Leningrad and the front continue to function efficiently despite German attempts to bomb and strafe railway trains. Tass said the railways were supplying the front regularly with troops and arms.

Marshal Timoshenko issued a special order of the day congratulating Gen. Konev.

"The troops commanded by Konev continue inflicting grave defeats," said Tass. "They routed a Fascist infantry division, captured its artillery, smashed its headquarters and killed not less than 3,000 officers and men.

"Enemy reinforcements brought up from the rear also have been routed. Our troops annihilated 130 tanks, over 100 trucks, many guns and large quantities of ammunition.

"Pressing the offensive, Konev's men continue to advance, liberating our villages from the German invaders and giving the enemy no single minute of respite."

Churchill Tells Japanese to 'Stop' corruption, and calling it a 'Chinese incident.'"

The prime minister reminded his hearers that Japan was stretching southward.

"They snatch Indo-China from the wretched Vichy French," he said. "They menace, by their movements, Siam; menace Singapore, the British link with Australasia, and menace the Philippine Islands which are under the protection of the United States."

"It is certain this has got to stop," Churchill said. "Every effort will be made to secure a peaceful settlement. The United States is laboring with infinite patience to arrive at a fair and amicable settlement which will give Japan the utmost reassurance for her legitimate interests.

"We earnestly hope that these negotiations will succeed," Churchill said, and then he added his assurance that if they did not Britian was on the United States' side.

Reports on Conference

When he had finished his tirade against Japan, Churchill came back abruptly to "a quiet bay, somewhere in the Atlantic where a misty sunshine plays on great ships which carry the white ensign or the Stars and Stripes.

Churchill made much play with the symbolism of the meeting with President Roosevelt "somewhere in the Atlantic," the Prime Minister used it to its utmost in appealing to the nations of Europe which are under Nazi domination. One by one, he called the roll, the Norwegians, the Danes, the Poles, the Yugoslavs, the Serbs, the Croats, the Greeks, the Austrians, the Czechs and "above all" the French.

He named two other categories of European nations. One included Italy, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria "who have bought a shameful respite by becoming jackals of a tiger;" the other included Sweden, Spain and Turkey who "stand appalled, wondering who will be struck down next."

To all these nations—and by inference to Germany—Churchill held out the "Atlantic Conference" as the hope of the future. He said:

"This was the meeting which marks forever in the pages of history the taking up by the English-speaking nations amid all this peril, tumult and confusion, of guidance of the fortunes of all the toiling masses of all the continents, and our loyal effort, without any clog of selfish interest, to lead them forward out of the miseries into which they had been plunged, back to the broad highroad of freedom and justice."

Praise for Russia

Saying that Hitler had tried to apply to Russia the same technique he had used on every other country, the prime minister said "this time it was not so easy. The Russians are fighting with devotion, efficiency and excellent equipment." Churchill said. "Certainly 1,500,000 perhaps, 2,000,000 of Nazi cannon fodder have bit the dust of the endless plains of Russia," he added.

In retaliation, Churchill continued, the Germans have visited wrath upon the defenders left behind the Soviet armies. "Since the Mongol invasions of Europe in the sixteenth century there has never been a methodical, merciless butchery on such a scale or approaching such a scale," Churchill said. "And this is but the beginning," he continued, "Famine and pestilence have yet to follow in the bloody ruts of itler's tanks. We are in the presence of a crime without a name."

A Lesson for U. S.

Churchill also had lessons from the conflict for the people of the United States. The question has been asked, how near is the United States to war, he said, and he answered it by saying that Hitler is the man who knows the answer.

Hitler, the prime minister continued, has every reason to declare war on the United States but the reason he has not done so is that he is afraid. Hitler's policy, Churchill continued, always has been to conquer nations one by one. And the reason he is attacking Russia now is that he wants to turn his whole force on Britain.

Then, Churchill said, if he were to win, Hitler would settle his account with the people of America and the Western Hemisphere, adding:

"I rejoiced to find that the President saw in their true light and proportion the dangers whereby the American people as well as the British people are now beset." The prime minister continued that it was by the "mercy of God" that Mr. Roosevelt had begun eight years ago to strengthen the United States Navy, whereby the "United States still retains its power to marshal her gigantic strength and in saving itself, to render an incomparable service to the world."

Skunk Adds Realism To Army Gas Alarm

By International News Service

With the Texas Forces on Maneuvers Somewhere in Louisiana, Aug. 24.—Soldiers assigned to the 114th Field Artillery regimental command post had experience tonight in handling gas masks during an emergency.

To keep the men alert a "gas alarm" was sounded. There were frantic grabs for masks when the cry went up: "Something's wrong! They're using real poison gas!"

Some quick-witted soldier detected an unfamiliar odor and leaped to the conclusion that something like phosgene had been released by mistake.

U. S. Makes Too Few Planes Because It Made No Plans

Into Norway and Denmark. In May he struck at Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, and in the next month he bowled over France.

It was on May 16, 1940, that President Roosevelt called for 50,000 military and naval planes and an industry geared up to turn out 50,000 every year.

The same Congress that had denied the Air Corps 1400 planes in March turned around in June and gave it the money for 3500 planes. In the following September Congress increased the figure to 18,000.

How many first-line planes the Air Corps has now is a military secret, but you can bet that the number is far, far from 18,000. Indeed it is doubtful if the Air Corps has ever come abreast of the old Woodring program, which called for some 5500 planes.

SO MUCH for the gloomy side of the picture. From the standpoint of personnel the Air Corps is in good shape. The pilots and fledgling pilots are of a quality that would make Marshal Hermann Goering green with envy. The same might be said of the gunners, observers and ground crews.

The Air Corps is now being expanded from a force of 180,000 officers and men to one of more than 300,000 officers and men. The rate of training pilots is being stepped up to 30,000 a year.

The war planes now being produced in the United States are, despite some talk to the contrary, the equal of anything in the world, and in many cases greatly superior to anything made in Britain or Germany.

The melancholy aspect of the picture is seen at the Army's air fields and also in the testimony of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, before committees of Congress.

In the words of Gen. Marshall, the eager young pilots of the Air Corps are "starving" for combat planes in which to round out their training.

There is no serious shortage of training planes. The young fellows learn how to fly, all right; the disheartening thing is that they are being frustrated in their desire to learn how to fight. There is a vast difference between flying a 200-mile-an-hour training plane and a 400-mile-an-hour combat plane, equipped with machine guns and cannon.

GEN. Marshall explained all this to a House Appropriations subcommittee when he testified on the 1942 Army bill. After telling about the early training of the pilots, he said:

"The difficulty arose when we put a man in a squadron, where he had to learn to work with other people. There we had deficiencies for quite a while. This was most serious because, in a sense, the young pilot was starving.

"He was starving for material. He had all his energy and his intense desire to do something, the restlessness of youth, but there were not sufficient planes to fly. The situation produced a difficult morale problem because a starving man is not very logical. . . ."

Lack of Tools Is No Incentive To Good Morale

Gen. Marshall said the situation was being remedied as combat planes came out of the factories in greater number. The truth is, however, that the number coming out is still but a trickle when considered against the Army's needs. Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, charged as much recently, and President Roosevelt, although challenging the Virginian's figures on guns and tanks, agreed that his statement concerning plane production was essentially correct.

Actually, figures of airplane production in the United States—1500 last month, 1600 this month, and so on—don't mean anything, where the Army Air Corps is concerned.

In its role as the "arsenal of democracy," the United States is turning out planes not alone for the Army and the Navy, but for the British Empire, for Russia, for China, and for the Dutch East Indies.

OUT of a monthly plane production of, say, 1600 planes, the Army may get no more than 200.

The argument is made that an American-made bomber or fighter is doing a great deal more for democracy if placed in the hands of those who are actively battling the Nazis and the Japanese, than if kept at home.

The Air Corps Can't Afford Optimism

Not many Americans will dispute that argument.

But consider now the position of the Air Corps. Like any military organization, it has to think in terms of the worst that might happen and it has to try to be prepared for it.

For the moment it looks as if the Russians might have the Germans in the trenches for Christmas, and it also looks as if the Japanese are not nearly so rambunctious as they were a few weeks ago.

Suppose, though, that this optimistic picture should change. Suppose that there should come an Axis squeeze play in the Atlantic and the Pacific, and that the Air Corps was called on to dispatch a heavy force of American pilots and planes to Hawaii and another heavy force to Natal, Brazil.

THE Air Corps simply is not ready for such a task. Even if the planes could, in some magical way, be produced suddenly, it would not be ready, for the pilots must have had at least three months of experience flying them.

Donald W. Douglas, the West Coast aircraft manufacturer, told the Truman Senatorial subcommittee the other day that in a 12-month period beginning July 1, 1940, the American aircraft industry turned out 11,840 planes. Of these, 7423 were turned out in the last half of the 12-month period, indicating a rise in the rate of production.

Now consider these figures in the light of reports from the Russian front.

The Germans claim that they have destroyed or captured 11,250 Russian planes. The Russians naturally deny this claim. They say they have lost only 4500 planes and claim that they have destroyed 7200 German planes.

Humming Bird Has Crown, but Not Enough

The truth would seem to lie somewhere in the middle here, and in that case the Germans and Russians have lost as many planes in two months of fighting as the American aircraft industry turned out in a year.

Mr. Douglas, in outlining to the Truman Committee the scope of the aircraft industry's task, said:

"Neither our industry nor any other industry in this country was ever burdened with so immense a task, with so little preparation or warning."

THAT IS true, and the way in which the aircraft industry has met the challenge has won it well-deserved praise.

But the most than can be said is this: that the hummingbird that was expected to lay an ostrich egg has now grown to about pigeon size.

The United States in time can have as big an air force as it wants. It also can supply the planes that are needed by Britain, Russia, China and the Dutch East Indies. But it cannot do so on the basis of the present program, or as long as the Government persists in trying to impose a war economy on a luxury economy.

The aircraft production program will have to be revised upward in spectacular fashion, and every responsible defense official in Washington knows it whether he will admit it or not.

In the meantime, a lot of these officials would like to know something about America's military policy, assuming that there is a policy.

The eight-point declaration drafted by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill called for "the destruction of the Nazi tyranny." What, it is being asked, is America's role expected to be in that particular task? So far as defense officials and a good many high-ranking officers are concerned, the whole business is a mystery.

the railrodas against sabotage attempts. The guards will be held personally responsible for such attempts, it was stated.

Puchu announced solution of the bomb slaying of Socialist Leader Marx Dormoy and of the bombing of a Vichy synagogue but termed them much less important than anti-German acts.

He said six persons were involved in the slaying of Dormoy on July 23 and that three of them subsequently had been killed when a bomb one of them was carrying exploded at Nice, August 14. Two others were said to have been arrested.

Those concerned in both the slaying and the bombing of the Vichy synagogue, August 10, were reported to have been members of the pro-Fascist Jacques Doriot movement.

Pucheu said such bombings failed to solve the problem of ridding France of the "Jewish-Masonic crust" of the old regime, and only resulted in turning the public against a "real and necessary clean-up."

Text of Churchill's Report on Conference With Roosevelt

Prime Minister Says Parley Was Symbol of Hope for Nazis' Victims

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 24.—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast tonight:

I thought you would like me to tell you something about the voyage I made across the ocean to meet our great friend, the President of the United States. Exactly where we met is secret, but I don't think I shall be indiscreet if I go so far as to say that it was "somewhere in the Atlantic."

In a spacious landlocked bay which reminded me of the west coast of Scotland, powerful American warships protected by strong flotillas and far-ranging aircraft awaited our arrival and, as it were, stretched a hand out to help us in.

Our party arrived in the newest, or almost the newest, British battleship, the Prince of Wales, with a modest escort of British and Canadian destroyers. And there for three days I spent my time in company and, I think I may say, in comradeship with Mr. Roosevelt while the chiefs of staff and naval and military commanders both of the British Empire and of the United States sat together in continual council.

President Roosevelt is the thrice-chosen head of the most powerful state and community in the world. I am a servant of King and Parliament at present charged with principal direction of our affairs in these fateful times and it is my duty also to make sure, as I have made sure, that anything I say or do in the exercise of my office is approved and sustained by the whole British Commonwealth of Nations.

A Symbolic Meeting

Therefore this meeting was bound to be important because of the enormous forces at present only partially mobilized but steadily mobilizing which are at the disposal of these two major groupings of the human family, happen to speak the same language and very largely think the same thoughts or, anyhow, think a lot of the same thoughts.

The meeting was therefore symbolic. That is its prime importance. It symbolizes, in form and manner which everyone can understand in every land and in every clime, deep underlying unities which stir and at decisive moments rule English-speaking peoples throughout the world.

Would it be presumptuous for me to say that it symbolized something even more majestic, namely, the marshalling of the good forces of the world against the evil forces which are now so formidable and triumphant and have cast their cruel spell over the whole of Europe and large part of Asia?

This was a meeting which marks forever in the pages of history the taking up by English-speaking nations, amid all this peril, tumult and confusion, of the guidance of the fortunes of the broad toiling masses in all continents, and our loyal effort, without any clog of selfish interest to lead them forward out of the miseries into which they have been plunged, back to the broad highroad of freedom and justice.

Our Highest Honor

This is the highest honor and the most glorious opportunity which could ever have come to any branch of the human race. When one beholds how many currents of extraordinary and terrible events have flowed together to make this harmony, even the most skeptical person must have the feeling that we all have a chance to play our part and do our duty in some great design the end of which no mortal can foresee.

Awful and horrible things are happening in these days. The whole of Europe has been wrecked and trampled down by the mechanical weapons and the barbaric fury of the Nazis. The most deadly instruments of war and science have been joined to extreme refinements of treachery and the most brutal exhibitions of ruthlessness and thus have formed a combine of aggression the like of which has never been known before.

The characteristics and structure of many ancient nad honored states and peoples have been laid prostrate, and are now ground down under the heel and terror of the monster—Austrians, Czechs, Poles, Norwegians, Danes, Belgians, Dutch, Greeks, Croats and Serbs, above all the great French nation—have been stunned and pinioned. Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, have brought shameful respite by becoming jackals of the tiger.

Cannot Recover Unaided

But their true situation is very little different, and will presently be indistinguishable, from that of his victims. Sweeden, Spain and Turkey stand appaled, wondering which will be struck down next. Here then is a vast pit into which all of the most famous states and races of Europe have been flung and from which unaided they can never climb.

But all this did not satiate Adolf Hitler. He made a treaty of non-aggression with Soviet Russia, just as he made one with Turkey, in order to keep them quiet till he was ready to attack them and then nine weeks ago today without a vestige of provocation he hurled millions of soldiers with all their apparatus upon a neighbor he had called his friend with the avowed purpose of destroying Russia and tearing her to pieces.

This frightful business is now unfolding day by day before our eyes. Here is a devil who in the mere spasms of his pride and lust for domination can condemn two or three millions—perhaps it may be many more—of human beings to speedy and violent death. "Let Russia be blotted out, let Russia be destroyed, order the armies to advance"—such were his decrees. Accordingly, from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea six or seven millions of soldiers are locked in mortal struggle.

Not Easy This Time

Ah, but this time it was not so easy. This time it was not all one way. The Russian armies and all the peoples of the Russian Republic have rallied to the defense of their hearths and homes. For the first time Nazi blood has flowed in fearful flood. Perhaps a million and a half, perhaps two millions, of Nazi cannon fodder have bit the dust of the endless plains of Russia.

A tremendous batle rages along nearly 2000 miles of front. The Russians fight with magnificent devotion. Not only that. Our generals who have visited the Russian front alike report with admiration the efficiency of their military organization and the excellence of their equipment. The aggressor is surprised, startled, staggered. For the first time in his experience, mass murder has become unprofitable. He retaliates by the most frightful cruelties.

As his armies advance, whole districts are being exterminated. Scores of thousands—literally scores of thousands—of executions in cold blood are being perpetrated by German police troops upon Russian patriots who defend their native soil.

Since the Mongol invasion of Europe in the sixteenth century there has never been a methodical, merciless butchery of such scale. And this is but the beginning.

Famine and pestilence have yet to follow in the bloody ruts of Hitler's tanks. We are in the presence of a crime without a name.

Asiatic Counterpart

But Europe is not the only continent to be tormented and devastated by aggressions. For five long years Japanese military factions seeking to emulate the style of Hitler and Mussolini, taking all their posturing as if it were some new European revelation, have been invading and harrying the 500 million inhabitants of China. Japanese armies have been wandering about that vast land in futile excursions, carrying with them carnage, ruin, and corruption and calling it "The Chinese incident.'

Now they stretch a grasping hand into the southern seas of China. They snatch Indo-China from the wretched Vichy French. They menace by their movements Siam. They menace the Singapore British link with Australasia and menace the Philippine Islands which are under the protection of the United States. It is certain that this has got to stop. Every effort will be made to secure a peaceful settlement.

The United States are laboring with infinite patience to arrive at a fair and amicable settlement which will give Japan the utmost reassurance for her legitimate interests.

We earnestly hope these negotiations will succeed. But this I must say, that if these hopes should fail we shall, of course, range ourselves unhesitatingly at the side of the United States.

And thus we came back to a quiet bay somewhere in the Atlantic where misty sunshine plays on great ships which carry the White Ensign or the Stars and Stripes.

Aimed to Revive Hope

We had the idea when we met there—the President and I—that without attempting to draw final and formal peace aims or war aims it was necessary to give all peoples and especially the oppressed and conquered peoples a simple rough-and-ready wartime statement of the goal toward which the British Commonwealth and the United States mean to make their way and thus make way for others to march with them upon the road which will certainly be painful and may be long.

There are, however, two distinct and marked differences in this joint declaration from the attitude adopted by the Allies during the latter part of the last war and no one should overlook them.

The United States and Great Britain do not now assume that there will never be any more war again. On the contrary, we intend to take any precautions to prevent its renewal in any period we can foresee by effectively disarming the guilty nations while remaining suitably protected ourselves.

The second difference is this: That instead of trying to ruin German trade by all kinds of additional trade barriers and hindrances as was the mood of 1917, we have definitely adopted the view that it is not in the interests of the world and of our two countries that any large nation should be unprosperous or shut off from means of making a decent living for itself and its people by its industry and enterprise. These are far-reaching changes of principle upon which all countries should ponder.

Above all it is necessary to give hope and assurance of final victory to those many scores of millions of men and women who are battling for life and freedom or who are already bent down under the Nazi yoke.

Hitler and his confederates have for some time been adjuring, bullying and beseeching populations whom they have wronged and injured to bow to their fate, to resign themselves to their servitude, and for sake of some mitigations and indulgences, to collaborate—that is the word—in what is called the new order in Europe.

Nature of the New Order

What is this new order which they seek to fasten first upon Europe and if possible—for their ambitions are boundless—upon all the continents of the globe?

It is the rule of the Herrenvolk, the master race who are to put an end to democracy, to parliaments, to fundamental freedoms and decencies of ordinary men and women, to historic rights of nations, and give them in exchange the iron rule of Prussia, a universal goose-step and strict, efficient discipline enforced upon working classes by political police, with German concentration camps and firing parties, now so busy in a dozen lands always handy in the background.

Napoleon in his glory and genius spread his empire far and wide. There was a time when only the snows of Russia and the white cliffs of Dover, with their guardian fleets stood between him and the dominion of the world. Napoleon's armies had a theme, they carried with them the surges of the French revolution.

"Liberty, Equality and Fraternity"—that was the cry. There was a sweeping away of outworn, medieval systems and aristocratic privilege, land for the people, a new code of laws.

Nevertheless, Napoleon's empire vanished like a dream.

But Hitler—Hitler has no theme nought but mania, appetite and exploitation. He has, however, weapons and machinery for grinding down and holding down conquered countries, which are a product, a sadly perverted product, of modern science.

The ordeals, therefore, of the conquered peoples will be hard. We must give them hope, we must give them conviction that their sufferings and their resistances will not be in vain. The tunnel may be dark and long, but at its end there is light.

That is symbolism, and that is the message of the Atlantic meeting.

"Do Not Despair"

Do not despair, brave Norwegians: Your land shall be cleansed, not only from the invader, but from the filthy Quislings who are his tools.

Be sure of yourselves, Czechs: Your independence shall be restored.

Poles: The heroism of your people standing up to the cruel oppressors, the courage of your soldiers, sailors, and airmen, shall not be forgotten. Your country shall live again and resume its rightful part in the new organization of Europe.

Lift up your heads gallant Frenchmen: Not all the infamies of Darlan and Laval shall stand between you and the restoration of your birthright.

Tough, stout-hearted Dutch, Belgians, Luxembourgers. Tormented, mishandled, shamefully cast away peoples of Yugoslavia.

Glorious Greece now subjected to the crowning insult of rule by the Italian Jackanapes: Yield not an inch. Keep your souls clean from all contact with the Nazi. Make them feel, even in their fleeting hour of brutish triumph, that they are the moral outcast of mankind. Help is coming. Mighty forces are arming in your behalf. Have faith: Have hope. Deliverance is sure.

There is the signal which we have flashed across the waters. And if it reaches the hearts of those to whom it is sent, they will endure with fortitude and tenacity their present misfortunes in sure faith that they, too, are still serving the common cause and that their efforts will not be in vain.

You will perhaps have noticed that the President of the United States and the British representatives in what is aptly called the Atlantic Charter have jointly pledged their countries to the final destruction of Nazi tyranny. That is a solemn and grave undertaking. It must make good. It will be made good, and of course many practical arrangements to fulfill that purpose have been and are being organized and set in motion.

The question has been asked: How near is the United States to war? There is certainly one man who knows the answer to that question.

Hitler Could Tell

If Hitler has not yet declared war upon the United States it is surely not out of his love for American institutions. It is certainly not because he could not find pretext. He has murdered half a dozen countries for far less.

The fear of immediate redoubling of the tremendous energies now being employed against him is no doubt a restraining influence. But the real reason is, I am sure, to be found in the method to which he has so faithfully adhered and by which he has gained so much. What is that method? It is a very simple method. "One by one"—that is his plan; that is his guiding rule; that is the trick by which he has enslaved so large a portion of the world.

Three and a half years ago I appealed to my fellow countrymen to take the lead in weaving together a strong defensive union within the principles of the League of Nations of all countries who felt themselves in ever-growing danger; but none would listen. All stood idle while Germany rearmed. Czecho-Slovakia was subjected. The French government deserted their faithful ally and broke their plighted word in that ally's hour of need.

Russia was cajoled and deceived into a kind of neutrality or partnership while the French army was annihilated. The Low Countries and Scandinavian countries, acting with France and Great Britain in good time, even after the war had begun, might have altered its course and would have had, at any rate, a fighting chance. The Balkan states had only to stand together to save themselves from the ruin by which they are now engulfed.

Crime's Way Made Smooth

But one by one they were undermined and overwhelmed. Never was a career of crime made more smooth. Now Hitler is striking at Russia with all his might, well knowing the difficulties of geography which stand between Russia and the aid which Western democracies are trying to bring. We shall strive our utmost to overcome all difficulties and bring this aid. We have arranged for a conference in Moscow between the United States, British and Russian authorities to settle the whole plan. No barrier must stand in the way.

But why is Hitler striking at Russia and inflicting and suffering himself this frightful slaughter? It is with the declared object of turning his whole force upon the British Island. And if he could succeed in beating the life and strength out of us——which is not so easy—then is the moment when he will settle his account—and it already is a long one—with the people of the United States and generally with the Western Hemisphere.

"One by one"—There is the process, there is the simple, dismal plan which has served Hitler so well. It needs but one final successful application to make him master of the world. I am devoutly thankful that some eyes, at least, are fully opened to it while time remains.

I rejoiced to find that President Roosevelt saw in their true light and proportion the extreme dangers by which the American people as well as the British people are now beset. It was indeed by the mercy of God that he began eight years ago that revival of strength of the American Navy without which the new world today would have to take its orders from European dictators, but with which the United States still retains the power to marshal her gigantic strength and, in saving herself, render incomparable service to mankind.

Recalls Sunday Services

We had a service on Sunday in our Atlantic bay. The President came on the quarter deck of the Prince of Wales where there were mingled together many hundreds of American and British sailors and marines. The sun shone bright and warm while we all sang old hymns which are our common inheritance and which we learned as children in our homes. We sang a hymn founded on a Psalm which John Hampden's soldiers sang when they bore his body to the grave and in which the brief, precarious span of human life is contrasted with one to whom a thousand ages are but as yesterday when it is past and as a watch in the night.

We sang the sailors' hymn for those in peril, and there are very many in peril on the sea. We sang "Onward Christian Soliers," and, indeed, I felt this was no vain presumption but that we had a right to feel we were serving a cause for the sake of which the trimpet has sounded from on high.

When I looked upon that densely packed congregation of fighting men of the same language, of the same faith, of the same fundamental laws, of the same ideals and now to large extent of the same interests and certainly in different degrees facing the same dangers, it swept across me that here was the only hope but also the sure hope of saving the world from measureless degradation.

And so we came back across the ocean waves uplifted in spirit, fortified in resolve.

Some American destroyers which were carrying mails to United States Marines in Iceland happened to be going the same way, so we made a goodly company at sea together and when we were right out in mid-passage one afternoon a noble sight broke on view. We overtook one of the convoys which carry munitions and supplies of the New World to sustain the champions of freedom of the old.

The whole horizon seemed filled with ships. Seventy or 80 ships of all kinds and sizes arrayed in 14 lines, each of which could have been drawn with a ruler, hardly a wisp of smoke, not a straggler, but all bristling with cannon and other precautions on which I will not dwell, surrounded by their British escorting vessels, while overhead far-ranging Catalina airboats soared in vigilant protection as eagles in the sky.

And then I felt that hard and terrible and long drawn out as this struggle may be, we shall not be denied the strength to do our duty to the end.

Churchill Speech Applauded By Administration Supporters

By Ernest Barcella
United Press Staff Writer

Administration supporters last night applauded Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech—particularly the warning to Japan—but isolationist Leader Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, charged it was "designed to frighten the United States into the idea that we have got to get into the war now or else Hitler will get us."

Some State Department officials listened to the speech, but they declined comment on all its phases, including Churchill's reference to United States-Japanese negotiations aimed at a peaceful settlement of outstanding issues.

Churchill's outspoken reference to these talks was the first official disclosure that such negotiations are under way, although it is a well-known fact that American and Japanese authorities have been conferring frequently recently. Nature of these discussions has not been revealed previously, but it was assumed the talks dealt with efforts to solve the tense situation between the two countries.

Secretary of State Hull and Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura conferred for 20 minutes yesterday. Leaving, the envoy reiterated it would be "folly of the worst kind" if the gaps in policy between the two governments were not bridged.

Unofficial sources interpreted Churchill's pledge that Britain would stand "unhesitatingly on the side of the United States if these hopes (for peaceful settlement of United States-Japanese problems) fail" as one of the most sweeping British commitments to American Far East policy.

Wheeler, referring to the Churchill pledge of aid, bluntly remarked: "We don't need any help from Great Britain or anybody else, we're able to take care of ourselves."

He said he did not think that "many people in the United States will be impressed with" Churchill's speech.

Two members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee—Senators Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas — supported Churchill's stand on the Japanese question. They thought the reference to Japan was one of the most salient features of the speech in view of tense United States-Japanese relations.

Capper said Churchill "gave the Japanese some pretty good advice."

Thomas said Churchill "gave notice to Japan that she must get herself out of the Rome-Berlin Axis." He asserted that the Prime Minister's views in this connection were a "restatement of the whole American policy of nonrecognition of conquest by force and consistent with what our policy has been in the Far East."

$30,601,662 of It Goes to Washington Staff of 184,236

Uncle Sam was paying monthly salaries totaling $205,581,047 to 1,370,110 civilian workers in the executive branch of the Government at the close of the fiscal year June 30, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday.

It cost him $30,601,662 to pay the 184,236 Federal employes in Washington alone, the report showed, and $174,979,385 for the 1,185,874 Government workers employed outside of the District.

During last June executive payrolls zoomed from $198,383,389, expended the previous month, to $205,581,047, the report said.

In the District 50,380 persons were added to the Government pay roll during the fiscal year. A total of 63,777 persons were added to the executive branch of the Government throughout the Nation in June alone, it was reported, with an increase of 218,962 during the entire 12 months.

The War Department here added 1566 persons during June, the Navy Department 1263 and Civil Service Commission 1261. As a whole, during June, the War Department increased its personnel by 28,179 persons; Navy, 11,417; Agriculture, 4703; Postoffice, 4360; Panama Canal, 3098; Interior, 2417, and Civil Service Commission, 2172.

Some of the pricipal national defense agencies during the fiscal year jumped from 333,875 persons in June, 1940, to 672,45 in June, 1941.

These were War Department, from 137,318 ti 320,291; Navy, 117,981 to 222,862; Civil Service Commission, 2780 to 6709; Panama Canal, from 21,913 to 36,425; Tennessee Valley Authority, 13,935 to 23,006, and the Veterans' Administration, 39,873 to 42,948.

Largest increases were shown in the Office of Emergency Management, which boomed from 75 persons to 3624, and the Selective Service System, which rose from zero in June, 1940, to 16,593 in June, 1941.

Bicycle Sales Soar as Gas Supply Shrinks know that they can always get where they want to go on a bicycle.

Park police reported that the bicycle fad was increasing daily. Hundreds of persons are renting bicycles at the Welfare recreation concession in East Potomac Park and there are no longer enough of the bikes to supply the demand. The manager of the concession said he had ordered 500 additional "wheels" to, accomodate customers.

The American Automobile Association yesterday urged Congress to investigate the gasoline situation and, if the inquiry found that Federal supply control is needed, to set up machinery for orderly apportionment of the motor fuel.

Conflicting actions and statements of Federal officials, the organization asserted, have left the eight million motorists of the Eastern seaboard confused as to the true situation and what is expected of them.

Price-Jacking Charged

"A Congressional investigation would serve to bring about what is sorely needed," the A. A. A. petition declared, "namely, a clear statement of the facts in the interest of public understanding."

The auto association also charged that gasoline prices were being raised in widely separated areas, "a development to which, as far as can be ascertained, little or no attention is being given either by the office of the Petroleum Coordinator or by the office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply."

Manwhile Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator for national defense, said yesterday that the gasoline situation here was about normal yesterday. Most Capital service stations were closed to conserve August quotas. He repeated that no motorist would be turned away from a filling station unserved over the Labor Day weekend. Sales are restricted now, he said, to 90 per cent of the July volume. Gasoline dealers doing business yesterday said that there was no great demand and few complaints were heard from motorists over lack of fuel. Some motorists, however, reported that it was difficult to get ample fuel on Maryland's Eastern Shore, where rationing was reported in effect.

The office of the petroleum coordinator yesterday issued the following question-and-answer explanation of the gasoline situation in Eastern States:

Q. Can motorists in the East Coast area buy gasoline for the pleasure cars?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the amount each motorist can buy at a filling station restricted?

A. That will depend upon the individual station's quota. He may be able to buy three, or five, or some other number of gallons, depending upon the station's quota.

Q. Will there be gasoline for Labor Day trips?

A. Yes. Filling station tanks will be filled up next Saturday and Sunday to take care of Labor Day travel.

There'll Be Gas for All

Q. Are drivers going to be stranded on Labor Day trips?

A. Not unless they let their cars run out of gas. There will be gasoline in the filling stations for their use.

Q. Should motorists take trips over Labor Day?

A. They should be prudent. There is a shortage of gasoline. If they can be satisfied with a short trip, so much the better.

Q. If a motorist has to make a long drive over the holiday, is there anything he can do to help himself and avoid wasting gasoline?

A. Yes, he should avoid high speeds and so operate his car that it will use the least possible amount of gasoline.

Q. What is the system by which gasoline sales are being restricted because of the shortage?

A. Each filling station has a quota of gasoline allowed to it. This quota is based on a percentage of the station's July sales. Each station will have to adjust its sales to fit the amount of gasoline allowed under its quota.

Q. What caused the shortage?

A. It is caused by lack of transportation to get gasoline and oil to the East Coast area.

Q. What caused the lack of transportation?

A. The transfer of a number of ocean oil tankers which formerly supplied the East Coast. These were put to work to help carry oil to beat Hitler. There are not enough tankers left in service to carry full supplies. In addition, consumption of gasoline on the East Coast has increased 12 per cent over last year so there is greater demand on the smaller supplies being delivered.

Q. Are the reports true that there will be no gasoline after September 1?

A. No.

Q. Is it true that stocks of gasoline on the East Coast are ample?

A. No. Stocks of gasoline are lower than last year at this time. In addition, consumption is greater and transportation facilities are less.

Q. Will the East Coast run completely out of gasoline and oil?

A. Not if motorists conserve. If they conserve, the many steps taken by the Government to get supplies to the East Coast area assure a continued though reduced supply of gasoline.

Q. I have read that there are many idle railroad tank cars that could be used to bring in oil, but aren't. How about that?

A. The Government has asked the oil companies to use every available tank car that can be found. The Government has asked them also to bring in gasoline and oil by barge, pipeline and motor truck.

Don't Handcuff President In Time of Peril, Barkley Asks

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, expressed confidence today that the American people are willing to surrender temporarily some of their liberties to the Government "in order that we may not be compelled to surrender them permanently to Hitler and Naziism."

Declaring that "we are in the midst of this war because we cannot escape its consequences," the Senate majority leader said in an address prepared for the opening of the forty-second annual National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars:

"Under these circumstances, we are compelled to confer unprecedented authority and power upon the head of our Government."

Barkley called the present crisis the gravest this nation has faced since the American Revolution and said "we probably have not been called upon yet to make all the sacrifices which will be required of us." But, he said, the American people "know how to make sacrifices when they are convinced of the necessity."

"We abhor war," he declared. "We believe and hope that our material aid to the nations now fighting aggression will be all that we need to put forth to preserve the things which are dear to America, but if as a last resort, the American people are compelled to fight to defend their country they will not prove less responsive to this call than they have proven in the past."

Barkley said there is no assurance the "conflagration burning elsewhere may not scorch our own shores and institutions." Moreover, he said, the American continent will become the immediate objective of aggressor dictators if Hitler wins.

"It is because of these things," he added, "that we have been compelled to increase our national debt to unprecedented figures, build a two-ocean Navy, train our young men for military service and levy unprecedented taxes upon the people.

"It is because of these things that the American people are willing to submit themselves to whatever restrictions may be necessary to preserve this country and hand it down to the generations yet unborn, free, strong and proud.

Barkley said that in doing this some persons fear that "we will surrender our democracy and our liberty." He replied by saying that during the American Revolution, and the Civil, Spanish-American and World wars the respective President asked and received greater powers.

And in each instance, he added, these powers were returned to the people when the wars were ended.

Barkley and Joseph C. Menendez, of New Orleans, the V. F. W.'s national commander, spoke at dedicatory services at Independence Square in the shadow of Independence Hall. Their addresses were broadcast over the Mutual network.

War Is Fight For Freedom, McNutt Says

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 24.—The war today is no longer an issue of nation against nation, but a question of man himself against the forces of despotism and oppression, Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, said here tonight.

"There will be a new order, indeed," McNutt told the seventeenth biannual convention of the Supreme Lodge, Order Sons of Italy in America, in Hotel Ambassador.

"Either the whole world will be revised on the basis of human freedom or it will be remade on a pattern which will have no place in it for the oldest aspirations of the race. This is the reason America has thrown the great weight of her resources into the struggle."

McNutt said when the time comes for the peoples of Europe to once again assert their rights to freedom, "they must know that their kinsmen and brothers in America and the Government of which they are a part stand ready to extend them every encouragement and aid.

"And it may well come to pass that the spark which stirs the mass imagination of the people in Italy will fly from their Italian brothers here," he said. "It might well be one of the ironies of history that these who are destined to lead Italy back to their lost freedom formed their counsel outside the borders of the homeland, in democratic America.

"The hope of the people in unhappy Europe lies with the people of the two great democracies left in the world. The hope of the people in Italy lies particularly with their Italian kinsmen in America."

The speaker said he would add a ninth point, freedom of religion and freedom of press, to the declaration of objectives by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Three hundred delegates, representing a membership of 300,000 in the order, greeted a reply of President Roosevelt to a resolution pledging loyalty to United States and opposition to the spread of fascism, communism and naziism in this country, passed at yesterday's session.

"Your expression of loyalty will be warmly received by the people of the United States," the President stated in his message. "These are times which demand unqualified loyalty. Of course, mere lip service does not necessarily mean loyalty, but to put one self squarely on record is an act of faith which must be given recognition. Similarly, the silence of those who shrink from such an act will not be ignored."

He described the resolution as a challenge to totalitarians who profess to see in the varied nationality groups here a threat to national unity.

"I am confident that other loyal groups of foreign extraction will follow your lead," the President said.

Army May Cut 10-Year Term Given Select

By the Associated Press

Authoritative sources indicated yesterday that the War Department would reduce drastically the 10-year court martial sentence imposed on John Habinyak, 28-year-old Pennsylvania selectee, for repeated disobedience of orders.

The Adjutant General of the Army, who has the case under study, is expected to recommend clemency to Secretary of War Stimson. There was no advance indication as to what modification of punishment would be proposed. Stimson, Army officials said, will act on the Adjutant General's recommendation Tuesday, and the case will then go to President Roosevelt for final review.

Habinyak, inducted into the Army June 23 from Central City, Pa., where he worked as a coal miner was charged before the military court with a variety of disciplinary breaches including spitting on the mess room floor and disobeying an order to clean up the saliva, refusing to clean up the floor around his bed, refusing to clean his mess kit, and refusing to pick up concrete blocks littering the road.

At Central City, southern Pennsylvania soft coal town of 2000 population, where Habinyak was born, relatives said today they had received no word from him since he left home for New York City in 1936.

His mother, Mrs. Katie Habinyak, said:

"John got up one morning and said he was leaving. He hasn't written home since."

Nick Habinyak, 34, a brother, said that after being notified of John's induction into the Army, members of the family motored to Fort Dix, N. J., to visit him, only to learn that he had been transferred to Fort Bragg, N. C.

Nick said neighbors and friends reported seeing John in New York on occasions, but that he ignored them.

"He was a good boy when he was home," Nick said.

Police Chief Orrie Meyers added that John had a good reputation here. He was of the type who "keeps his own company," the chief said.

John, once a Boy Scout, has three brothers and three sisters. Their father, Vasil, a miner, died 15 years ago.

His brother, Charles, 22, enlisted in the United States Marines a year ago and is expected home on leave soon.

Peter, 24, the other brother, said "I can hardly believe that they gave John such a stiff sentence for the slight infractions he was accused of."

is on vacation—but were out early beneath a brilliant sun in the President's especially equipped blue touring car.

With the Chief Executive behind the wheel, they drove over the 1,200-acre Roosevelt estate, and looked in on the hilltop cottage which the President himself designed.

The second drive and the visit to a display of WPA drawings of figureheads and sculptures on old sailing ships, on view in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, were on their afternoon schedule.

The President will hold his customary Monday morning conference with Congressional leaders. Asked whether a second lease-lend appropriation was ready for submission to Congress, a Presidential aide said: "I don't know. The boss said he just wanted to see them."

Those he specifically wants to see are Vice President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader McCormack.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained the duke at an informal lunch and equally informal dinner, bringing around the table only a few "neighbors and friends." No guest list was made public.

Tomorrow on his visit to Norfolk the duke will inspect U. S. Navy ship repair facilities. On Tuesday he will make his adieus and proceed to the Glenn L. Martin aviation plant at Baltimore, Md., now turning out heavy bombers for Britain.

A crowd of perhaps 200 persons saw them off at the village station. The spectators clapped and cheered as the Chief Executive and his party left a string of cars and went up a ramp to the rear platform of the train.

Mr. Roosevelt waved and called out, "Be back Saturday."

Red Division Tells Of Breaking Trap

not merely German but Finnish and Rumanian troops were encountered.

Sticking mainly to forest paths, the division turned east. It became necessary to have specific information of the enemy strength so one tiny officer—a captain less than five feet tall—visited a nearby village, donned a child's clothes, gathered a group of Russian children about him and wandered down to the bank of a stream where German officers were bathing. While other children laughingly scrubbed the Nazi officer's backs, the captain searched their papers and stole their maps and documents.

The way back was most difficult. The division suffered from lack of air support and eventually had exhausted its supply of ammunition. This was remedied by the capturing of German guns and ammunition.

At one point the division reached an important highway along which a heavy German motor transport was moving at a fast rate. At dusk the Russians killed a Nazi who was directing traffic. Then, with flashlight signals, they held up the enemy automobiles while the division crossed the road. After studying the captured maps, a Russian soldier, dressed in the slain's policeman's uniform, deliberately misdirected a Nazi tank column.

Take Over Traffic

At another time, the division came to a road where the Germans had laid down a series of heavy communications cables, insulated with a thick coating of rubber, in a wayside ditch. With axes, the Russians destroyed all but one cable which they could not cut. This was dragged across a neighboring bridge which was then set ablaze.

After the division had finally returned to its main forces, it rested an dis again participating in the action.

jurisdiction of the Maritime Commission.

To what extent Britain might be benefitted by putting her own sailors on American merchant ships was not immediately disclosed, since presumably provisions of the Neutrality Act forbidding American vessels to enter combat zones still would apply.

The Executive order permitting foreign manning of American ships, particularly those taken from Axis countries and their satellites declared in part that:

"Whenever the Secretary of Commerce, upon the basis of his investigation as to any such vessel, shall find the physical facilities of the vessel are not adequate to meet the requirements of the United States or that the employment of an alien master, officers or crew is necessary for its operation, he shall certify such finding or findings and the extent to the United States Maritime Commission, whereupon such provisions of law shall be waived to the extent and upon the terms set forth in such certification."

Interpretation Declined

In Washington, reachable officials of the Maritime Commission said they had not seen the order and declined any official interpretation, the Associated Press reported.

However, an official in close touch with maritime affairs said he understood the situation to be this:

Some of the foreign vessels seized in American ports have been transferred to Panamanian registry although till owned by and under the jurisdiction of the Maritime Commission.

These ships, flying the Panamanian flag, do not come under the neutrality law's prohibition against American vessels entering combat zones. However, Americans may not sail them into such zones since the neutrality law forbids.

In addition, basic American maritime law provides that vessels under jurisdiction of the Maritime Commission must be officered by American citizens.

By the waiving of this provision, alien officers and crewmen may be placed aboard those ships transferred to Panamanian registry and the vessels will be free to go to British or other ports within combat zones.

Tanker Charter Rate Ceiling Set

Copyright by New York Times

A scale of maximum time charter rates for United States and foreign flag tankers was announced yesterday by the Maritime Commission.

The schedule, effective September 1, "will tend to stabilize prevailing rates and prevent wide fluctuations in price of petroleum and its products induced by transportation charges," the commission said.

Recent enactment of the ship warrants law has provided the commission with a means of exercising rate control over foreign flag vessels and others which might fail to comply with established maximum rates voluntarily.

Charter rates for tankers are subject to further study by the commission, the results of such study to be announced before October 1. Last July 30 the commission announced a schedule of rates applying to dry cargo vessels.

Maximum time charter rates in the commission's scale range from $4.50 per deadweight ton per month on tankers of 10,000 deadweight tons or more, up to $6.05 per deadweight tons on vessels from 2500 to 2999 deadweight tons. The basic speed of the ships included in this rate schedule is 10 knots per hour. An additional charge of 10 cents per deadweight ton per month is permitted for each one-half knot in excess of 10 knots. Most of the tankers affected by the rate schedule are in the 10,000 deadweight ton category.

Banker's Cooing So Real He Gets Shot by Hunter

Milan, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—Siro Bernasconi, 30, a Milan banker, climbed a tree in the forests near Novara yesterday and began imitating the mating call of a turtle dove.

He hoped to attract the birds so he could shoot a few.

His cooing was so realistic that another hunter blazed away at the tree and brought down Bernasconi.

Buckshot was removed from his head and chest at a hospital.

God 'Corrects' Man Through Hitler, Elder Declares

Elder Lightfoot Solomon "Happy Am I" Michaux last night warned 10,000 people in Griffith Stadium that "both the Jews and Christians are being corrected by God through Hitler."

The Jew is being corrected, said the leader of the Church of God, "because he has failed to accept Jesus as his only hope of salvation, and the Christian Gentiles because they have failed to practice Christianity as taught by Jesus Christ, which is true democracy."

"We will win this war by the help of God," shouted the elder through the "mike" under the stadium floodlights, "when both Jew and Christian Gentiles join hands and say 'thanks be to God who give'h us the victory through our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.'"

The sermon was the first in a Sunday night series the elder is preaching on the V-for-victory theme.

(Yes I Did - Actually and Literally)

and as a result of that little talk with God, a strange Power came into my life. After 42 years of horrible, dismal, sickening failure, everything took on a brighter hue. It's fascinating to talk with God, and it can be done very easily once you learn the secret. And when you do—well—there will come into your life the same dynamic Power which came into mine. The shackles of defeat and fear which bound me for years, went a-shimmering — and now? — well, I own control of the largest afternoon daily newspaper in North Idaho. I own the largest office building in my City. I drive two beautiful cars, I own my own home which has a lovely pipe-organ in it, and my family are abundantly provided for after I'm gone. And all this has been made possible because, one day, about twelve years ago, I actually and literally talked with God.

You too may experience that strange mystical Power which comes from talking with God, and when you do, if there is poverty, unrest, unhappiness, ill-health, or material lack in your life, well—this same Power is able to do for you what it did for me. No matter how useless or how helpless your life seems to be — all this can be changed. For this is not a human power I'm talking about—it's a God-Power. And there are no limitations to the God-Power, are there? Of course not. You probably would like to know how you, too, may talk with God, so that this same Power which brought these good things to me, might come into your life too. I have written the strange, almost unbelievable story in two booklets, and I have given away literally millions of copies of them. As a matter of fact, the story has been told in 67 foreign countries, and in every city, town, village and hamlet in America. It has been written up by such outstanding periodicals as Time, Newsweek, Magazine Digest, and scores of other internationally-known publications.

I want to give you these two booklets. I want to give you also illustrated circulars, and copies of letters which tell what is being accomplished all over the world through this new strange Teaching. If you will send me your name and address on a post-card or in a letter, these two booklets will come to you free of charge. This experience may sound unbelievable, but it's true or I wouldn't tell you it was. The address is Dr. Frank B. Robinson, Dept. 1066, Moscow, Idaho.

George Sees Move to Broaden Tax Base

Predicts Provision In Revenue Measure Cutting Exemptions

By International News Service

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, last night forecast his committee will insert into the House-passed $3,200,000,000 revenue bill a provision to lower the personal income tax exemptions—a move that would add millions of persons to the Federal income tax roll.

With the committee meeting in executive session tomorrow on the battle-scarred bill, the Georgian said he expects the measure will be reported to the Senate by this weekend.

Democratic Senate Leader Barkley of Kentucky, has indicated the tax bill will be given the right of way in the Senate, after the Senate completes its month's "vacation" and returns to labor in mid-September.

While Senator George declined to guess what his committee would recommend in broadening the tax base, a survey of committee sentiment by International News Service indicated a majority is inclined to favor reducing the personal exemption for married persons from $2000 to $1500 and for single persons from $800 to $750.

Although the Treasury Department had recommended these reductions, the House Ways and Means Committee rejected them. The Senate Finance Committee in years past has recommended lowering of personal exemptions, chiefly under leadership of Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, but the Senate each time has tossed them out.

Treasury Department experts estimated that if personal exemptions are lowered as proposed by the Department 4,900,000 additional persons would file income tax returns next year. Added to the 17,107,000 estimated as likely to file returns under the House bill, this would make a grand total of 22,007,000 returns.

It was also estimated that out of the approximately 4,900,000 additional persons who would be made "tax conscious," only about 2,275,000 actually would pay the Government taxes, the others being eliminated by various deductions allowed.

Estimates were that out of the 17,107,000 persons who would file returns in 1942 under the House bill, 10,925,000 would pay taxes. Thus, with the 2,275,000 figured to be made taxpayers by lowering personal exemptions, this would make a total of 13,200,000 taxpayers for 1942.

A conflict in official estimates prevailed on the amount of additional revenue the Government would receive by lowering the personal exemptions as proposed. While the Treasury Department estimated 305 million dollars, experts of the joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue placed the total at 348 million dollars.

Navy to Reopen Kearny Shipyard

United States Maritime Commission: John Vincent, of the Office of the Undersecretary of the Navy, and N. P. Cassidy and F. W. Marshall, of the United States Navy Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

The company was represented by President Korndorff, W. C. Hemingway, vice president; C. W. O'Ryan, vice president in charge of sales, and F. J. McWilliams, comptroller.

Pickets Are Withdrawn

Representing labor in the latter part of the conference were John Green, national president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, C. I. O.; Daniel Deans, president, and Peter Flynn, vice president of the striking local, No. 16, of that union.

At 7:04 p. m., a messenger, arriving at the plant gates by automobile, handed a written order to one of the pickets. The message read:

"Please withdraw all pickets at once.

(Signed) "Daniel Deans."

The message bore the seal of the union.

Immediately, the eight men who had been marching up and down in front of the gates threw down their picket signs and cheered loudly. They believed that the strike which had cost more than 300,000 work days was over.

When President Roosevelt on Saturday issued the Executive Order directing the Secretary of the Navy to take over the struck plant, he laid the blame for the necessity of such an order on the Federal Co., which had refused to accept a recommendation by the National Defense Mediation Board which would have prevented the work stoppage.

Union leaders leaving the conference went to a closed meeting of the union's executive and strike committees. This meeting was addressed by Daniel S. Ring, labor relations director of the United States Maritime Commission.

Company Executives "Out"

According to Union Vice President Flynn, Ring told the strike leaders that President Korndorff and Vice Presidents Hemingway and O'Ryan "were out," as far as the future operation of the plant went. The meeting was also told that the workers would get everything the National Defense Mediation Board had recommended.

In a statement after his meeting with the tleaders, Ring said:

"I appeared before them and said that the Navy had come in to take over the operation of the yard. The instructions under which the Navy was acting were outlined in the Presidential executive order and that since the President is the Commander in Chief of the Navy, the procedure would be strictly within the limits of that order.

"I was authorized to tell them that as far as wages, hours and working conditions were concerned, they would be put into effect with the adjustments agreed upon by the employes and the company as of the time when negotiations finally broke off."

Leaders Report to Union

Union leaders then went to Jersey City and reported these assurances to a full membership meeting of the striking local. After listening to their leaders, Local No. 16 formally voted to end the strike and pledged their full cooperation to the Government in operating the plant.

Calling off of the strike was provided for in the following resolution, unanimously approved by the Jersey City meeting:

"The executive board of Local 16, by reason of assurances from representatives of the Government which will supervise operation of the federal yards that the rights of this union will be upheld and respected, hereby unanimously recommends that the strike be called off and that the union pledge fullest cooperation with the Government of the United States."

John Green, national president of the union, in telling of the local's action, told reporters:

"We consider this a complete and final victory for the union, because we have been assured that every recommendation of the National Defense Mediation Board will be put into effect."

Strike Ends, Detroit Cars Run Again

By the United Press

Detroit, Aug. 24. — Municipal transportation facilities here resumed operation at 4 p. m. today after A. F. of L. unionists accepted a settlement proposal for ending their five-day strike.

The walkout, which forced 1,200,000 daily passengers to walk or hitch-hike, was the longest one in the city's 19-year ownership of the system.

Elsewhere on the labor front, an Associated Press dispatch from Cleveland said, the threat of a strike in seven Great Lakes yards of the American Shipbuilding Co. diminished over the weekend. Representatives of the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. agreed to the holding of an election under supervision of the National Labor Relations Board to determine which union, if either, should be designated as the bargaining agent for the workers.

[The A. F. of L. had threatened to strike to enforce its demand for recognition as the bargaining unit. The company has 25 million dollars worth of defense orders.]

With only three dissenting votes, the 2,500 members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes (A. F. of L.) voted to accept the peace pact drafted by their leaders and Mayor Edward Jeffries after prolonged negotiations.

It called for a system-wide election Tuesday to determine the union having a majority of the employes. In return for this concession, Jeffries withdrew his objection to signing a contract granting sole negotiating rights for the system's 5,500 employes.

The A. F. of L. struck at 4 a.m. Wednesday after Jeffries refused to grant them exclusive use of the bulletin boards in the system barns. Their leaders accused a rival State, County and Municipal Workers' Union (C. I. O.), of raiding their membership through use of what they called "false propaganda" on the boards.

C. I. O. officials opposed the Tuesday election, but said their men returned to work.

A. F of L. leaders rejected a plea by the mayor for a joint conference with the C. I. O. to perfect election plans. They said that A. F. of L. operators had orders to stop any bus on which a C. I. O. organizer attempted to solicit memberships.

Complaints Bolster Congress Drive for Priorities Inquiry

By the Associated Press

A rising tide of complaints that small industries are being cut off from essential materials generated bipartisan support yesterday for a proposed Congressional investigation of the Government's system of defense priorities.

A resolution by Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, for a Congressional investigation of the piorities setup is scheduled to be considered by the Senate Commerce Committee Wednesday, along with a companion proposal for an inquiry into the Eastern Seaboard gasoline and fuel oil shortage.

Saying he would support Maloney's proposal, Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, declared that there had been injustices and discrimination against smaller manufacturing plants which were forcing many of them to close and "throwing thousands of men out of work."

No Place for Injustice

"Whatever virtue these priorities may have had in getting the defense program under way quickly seems to have been outweighed by the tremendous impact they have had on so-called nondefense industries," McNary told reporters. "There is a place for priorities, but there is no place for discrimination and injustice."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said he had received a "flood" of protests against such alleged discriminations and expressed belief there was need for centralization in one office of all authority over allocation of supplies to industry.

The Office of Production Management now exercises control over materials needed for defense, while the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supplies parcels outremaining supplies to nondefense plants.

George cited the specific example of a manufacturer of farm equipment who told him that steel and iron are under such strict priorities that he was unable to make plows. George said he believed plows were of sufficient importance to farm production that mterials should be allotted to their manufacture.

Regarding unemployment, he cited the case of silk workers who have lost jobs since imports of silk from Japan were banned. Many of these workers, he said, turned to the rayon industry, hoping to gain employment there. But, the Georgian continued, the rayon industry has not been able to expand because some elements vital to its production are under priorities and cannot be obtained by the industry. Therefore, it has been unable to absorb silk workers, he said.

Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut, said he thought it was essential to get the priorities investigation under way immediately before a serious dislocation in employment took place.

He recalled that the Senate Finance Committee, studying the $3,236,700,000 tax bill, had received testimony that 160,000 small industrial plants, employing approximately 2,500,000 persons, were threatened with "extinction" because they could not get the materials to keep going.

Soldier Tumbles Into Great Falls Rapids, Drowns

Richard D. Machan, 21, a corporal in the Air Corps at Bolling Field, drowned in Great Falls, Va., yesterday, while on a picnic with 13 other persons.

Machan, with a girl friend, Josephine Robinson, of 1738 M Street Northwest, was sitting on a rock just above the water, resting after lunch. When the two attempted to move to another rock, the soldier slipped and fell into the swirling rapids. He went under water, appeared once, seemed to hit a rock, and then disappeared according to his horrified companions. The rapids were too swift for anyone to attempt to save him.

The Glen Echo Fire Department and soldiers from Bolling Field will attempt to recover the body today.

Also at the picnic were two other soldiers from Bolling Field, Privates Anthony Bruno and Thomas Schauch. Machan is from Dundee, Ohio.

Tighter Credit Curbs Ahead, Eccles Warns

By International News Service

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Marriner Eccles last night intimated that regulations of instalment buying and credit may have to be further tightened in the interest of public welfare and the Government's continuing drive against inflation.

Unbridled spending by the public, Eccles warned, would precipitate a price inflation which "would recoil ruinously upon all of us, and imperil our entire economy."

Explaining the reasons for the regulations limiting periods of instalment buying on durable goods and setting maximum down payments, imposed last week under an executive order by President Roosevelt, Chairman Eccles asserted:

"The public should be fully aware that the regulations are subject to change. As economic conditions require a further dampening of buying power will be in order to safeguard the interests of consumers and the public generally."

Responding to first criticisms of the measures, Eccles said they are "by no means stringent or onerous," they are not being invoked as an "instrument of reform," that they do not actually prohibit instalment buying, and that their intent is "to protect, not to disrupt, the economy."

In an attempt to explain in layman's language the needs for the curbs, Eccles stated:

"The purpose is to help dampen demand for goods the civilian supply of which has already been reduced and must be further reduced because of defense neds. In a word, the purpose is to dampen demand, not to diminish production.

After September 1, all businesses extending instalment credit will be required to demand from 10 per cent to 33 1-3 per cent of the purchase price as down payment on a selected list of 24 durable goods. The length of time over which instalment payments can be spread will be limited to 18 months; the same time restriction will apply also to loans under $1,000 and to loans for home improvements.

To Make Way for Defense

"The imperative demands of defense must have the right of way over civilian needs," Eccles said. He explained that the Government seeks to curb consumer demand for articles which deprive the defense program of badly needed materials and manufacturing skills.

He recommended that American wage earners take advantage of present high incomes to "reduce their debts or get out of debt."

"Our people cannot spend their increased incomes and go into debt for more and more things today without precipitating price inflation," he said.

"Instead of an overexpanding volume of consumer credit, we need to bring about a substantial reduction in the total outstanding.

"By deferring civilian demand at this time, we can help avoid inflation, we can aid in defense and we can store up a backlog of buying power that will help offset a post-defense slump.

"The intent is not to disrupt but to protect the economy.

"The public shoud be fully aware," he concluded, "that the regulation is subject to change from time to time as experience with its administration develops and as economic conditions require a further dampening of buying power in order to safeguard the interests of consumers and the public generally."

Civilian OPM Proposed To Organize Goods Output

A proposal that Congress authorize an Office for Civilian Production and Welfare to promote the greatest possible output of civilian goods, prevent unemployment and economic dislocations that threaten small business, and act as a check upon inflation was made public yesterday by a group of noted economists and political scientists acting through the Union for Democratic Action, of which Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr is national chairman.

The proposal, copies of which have been sent to President Roosevelt, William Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, of OPM, and Leon Henderson, of OPACS, includes a plan for an overall planning board with an administrator to unify the economic defense effort.

U. S. Leaves It Up to Banks To Stop Leaks of Axis Funds

Copyright by New York Times

The Nation's 15,000 banks are the "financial sleuths" mainly relied upon by the Federal Government to enforce the freezing orders which prevent the functioning of Axis funds in the United States Treasury officials said yesterday.

The vital defense importance of thoroughgoing enforcement of these orders becomes clear when it is appreciated that for all sabotage and espionage, Axis agents must have funds. When the freezing orders are enforced the necessary funds are cut off.

Of almost equal importance to the enforcement of the freezing orders is full compliance with the unprecedented census of foreign assets which the Treasury has undertaken.

This census will, for the first time in history, provide an index of the ownership of all foreign property in the United States. This will prove invaluable, officials point out, in tracing shifts of funds from one alien title to another for use in damaging the national interests of the United States.

The order of President Roosevelt instituting the rigid exchange control popularly called "freezing" was designated officially as Executive Order 8389.

In an effort to apprise the Nation's banks of the importance of enforcement of this order, E. H. Foley, jr., acting Secretary of the Treasury, sent the following telegram to Federal Reserve Banks last week for forwarding to all member banks along with a pamphlet containing the official "freezing" orders as of that date.

"A completely efficient administration of Executive Order 8389, as amended, in every section of the Nation is of the greatest importance to the economic and financial side of national defense. The 15,000 banks of this country are a vital link in the success of foreign funds control. Most American banks have kept themselves fully informed of every step taken under the executive order and have cooperated expertly with the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Banks.

"Foreign funds control significantly affects the country's welfare. It places important responsibilities on every bank account throughout the Nation, no matter how small and no matter how few of its clients are foreign nationals or have financial transactions with foreign nationals. I believe that each bank should designate a senior officer to be in charge of foreign funds control problems affecting the bank, and to keep himself fully informed of all developments in this field. Kindly ask every bank in your didstrict to furnish you with the name of its officer so designated by the bank.

"The banks can also perform a real service by keeping their customers fully informed with respect to foreign funds control."

U. S. Weighs Hemp Seizure In Philippines

By the United Press

The United States is weighing the possibility of commandeering the Japanese-owned hemp industry in the Philippine Province of Davao in order to forestall a threatened shortage of hemp for the U. S. Navy, it was disclosed last night.

Government officials were revealed to have become increasingly concerned over shortage possibility since the Treasury froze Japanese assets, including those in the Philippines. Japanese nationals have a complete monopoly on hemp production in Davao, which supplies 75 per cent of this country's imports.

Hemp, from which rope is made, is of great importance to all shipping, both naval and merchant. All hemp used by the Navy normally comes from Davao; the Philippine Islands as a group enjoy a virtual world monopoly on hemp production.

This country, officials said, has a considerable reserve supply of the commodity. But its imports have declined rapidly in recent weeks, because of the drop in Davao production resulting from the inability of Japanese interests to engage in financial transactions.

Informed sources emphasized that no final decision has been reached, and that the issue has not been placed before President Roosevelt. It still is possible, they said, that some alternative might be found whereby actual requisitioning would not be necessary.

Time Mixups

On behalf of local sellers of light wines and beer the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors is petitioning the Virginia authorities for an extension of the closing hour to 1 a. m. (daylight-saving time). In other words, the local licensees want to operate on standard time as does the county in which they are situated. They point out that enforced closing at 11 p. m. (standard time) means loss of considerable business, especially by night clubs. Their petition calls attention to only one of many complications resulting from sporadic adoption of daylight-saving time by local communities. The chaos is maddening enough when States follow time schedules of their choice regardless of the practice of neighboring States. It is infinitely worse when, as in Virginia, State agencies are forced to observe daylight-saving hours while cities, towns and counties are free to do as they choose.

The handicaps imposed upon the regulated sellers of wines and beer in Fairfax County are obvious, but the remedy does not lie in making local exceptions to State-wide general rules governing closing hours. That would only give rise to a new batch of protests from resorts located in daylight-saving territory. The only way to correct a situation that is intolerable for everybody—including those free to adjust working hours to any schedule—is for Congress to act promptly upon proposals for the inauguration of daylight-saving. We need a time standardization plan applicable to the entire country to end the confusion which now prevails.

Outlook For Victory

Long before publication of his widely read book "You Can't Do Business With Hitler" Douglas Miller had become known to a limited circle of readers through the informative and objective reports which he made while serving as United States commercial attache in Berlin. During many years of residence in the German capital, he acquired a first-hand understanding of Germany's economic problems. Hence his article on the cost to the Nazis of the Russian campaign, appearing in the September Atlantic Monthly, is authoritative as well as interesting.

Reliable economic data are difficult to obtain from German sources even in times of peace, because the Nazis are accustomed to distort official statistics for propaganda purposes. With a war in progress, "reasonable probabilities", to use Mr. Miller's phrase, provide the only feasible basis for appraisal of Germany's present position and future prospects. Being of the opinion that Germany will not be able to obtain much material of the kind she needs from her Soviet conquest, Mr. Miller concludes that Russia was invaded solely to remove the menace of an attack from the rear. In other words, he assumes that the Nazi leaders decided on the conquest of Russia knowing full well that the material gains would be slight. He does not make the mistake of underrating their intelligence.

Mr. Miller believes that the German people will not suffer pangs of hunger this winter. On the contrary, he asserts that Germany is better supplied with food stocks than at the outbreak of the war. However, there are shortages of various industrial raw materials which are expected to become increasingly acute during the months ahead. Mr. Miller emphasizes in particular the bad effect upon morale of a deficiency in body-warming fats, a lack of fuel during long cold winters, inadequate clothing made of synthetic fibres, and shoes manufactured from leather substitutes. He also considers it likely that gasoline will become increasingly scarce as the war goes on; but the insufficiency of high grade lubricants is said to be much more serious. Lack of proper steel alloy constitutes another handicap that is expected to cause progressive deterioration of the quality of war equipment.

With the war on the Eastern Front taking huge quantities of all the scarce materials needed to clothe and equip an army, the Germans will, it is evident, pay a heavy price for the conquest of Russia. And if Mr. Miller is correct, they will have very few tangible gains to offset their own losses. The demoralizing effect of the losses in men, moreover, cannot be measured in numerical terms alone. There is reason to believe that the inroads upon the trained and experienced fighting forces have been especially heavy. Replacements will be difficult, too, as the country's man power is already fully employed and indeed being worked to a limit beyond which it may be dangerous to go. So the "reasonable probabilities" on which Mr. Miller bases his opinions lead him to conclude that "Hitler is on the down grade," and that Germany can be beaten. But, he warns, it is "going to be another long pull just as in the first World War."

End Of A Strike

President Roosevelt's executive order directing Secretary Knox to take over and operate the strike-bound plant at Kearny, N. J., settles one important problem. More than 16,000 workers will now go back to building ships for our national defense. Far too much time and energy have already been lost. Further delay in Government operation of the plant would have been inexcusable. Yet it is literally true that the action which the President was compelled to take has raised more problems than it has solved.

Officials of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. had asked the Government to take over the plant because they were unwilling to operate it on terms acceptable to the union. The National Defense Mediation Board had recommended a compromise settlement of the dispute under which union members would have to be fired if they failed to pay their dues or otherwise maintain their union membership. The company refused to face the problems which, it believed, this arrangement would thrust upon it. So it turned those problems over to the Government along with its plant. Doubtless that is why the President was so hesitant in taking possession of the Kearny shipyards.

One fact is clear: the union has lost its right to strike. Walkouts to force concessions from the Navy could not, of course, be tolerated. What, then, will be the relationship between the employes of this plant and the governmental agency operating it? John Green, president of the striking marine and shipbuilding workers, says they expect their collective bargaining rights to be preserved and the Defense Mediation Board's decision to be "vindicated". But the Government cannot reasonably gratify those great expectations. Its prime interest in operating the plant is in getting ships built for the Navy. It could not promise to discharge a man in a strategic position for failure to pay his union dues without danger of defeating the purpose for which it has seized the plant.

Apparently the Mediation Board panel which recommended the questionable compromise on maintenance of union membership was convinced that the union needed some kind of protection against unfair tactics on the part of the management. That argument fades away now that the plant is in the hands of the Navy. It may now be taken for granted that the rights of union men will be scrupulously guarded by the Government for whom they will be working. But the Government is also under obligation to protect the rights of the man who may wish, for what seems to him good reasons, to leave the union. To deprive a man of employment on a Government project for failure to pay dues to a private organization would be to subordinate the national interest and the democratic concept of individual freedom to the selfish demands of a special group. A government which is appealing for cooperation of all the people to make the defense program a success cannot reasonably put itself in that position.

The truth is that everyone loses when the overworked Navy is forced to take over a plant to insure continuous work on ships for defense. There should be no effort to conceal those losses. The management in this case doubtless already appreciates what it means to relinquish a plant to the Government. The employes also should learn that unions may cut their own throats by clinging to demands which force substitution of Government operation for private enterprise. The Kearny incident thus emphasizes once more the need for a labor policy that will protect all legitimate interests of workers without sanctioning coercive methods on which employers and employes cannot agree. It affords another opportunity to bring home the point that no group can be allowed to enforce its demands for special concessions by holding up the defense program.

Mexico Follows Suit

Cuba was the first Latin-American country to follow the lead of the United States by ordering the expulsion of German consuls. Mexico has now taken similar action by ordering the closing of all German consulates by September 1. In thus virtually severing commercial relations with the Reich we may be sure that neither Cuba nor Mexico is blindly following the example set by this country. For, as we well know, our southern neighbors do not take kindly to alien suggestions designed to influence their policies. They must first be convinced that it is to their own interest to act. The closing of the German consulates is thus a significant and encouraging move because it points to a growing awareness of the dangers from Fifth Column activities directed from within against the countries of Latin America.

Churchill's Warning

Winston Churchill has made many great speeches since that fearful hour, 16 months ago, when, called upon to take the helm of the storm-tossed and apparently foundering British ship of state, he warned his fellow Britons that he had nothing to offer them but "blood, tears, toil and sweat." The great majority of his past utterances have been addressed primarily to his hard-pressed countrymen. They have been eloquent calls to duty and high endeavor, unflinching in their realism. And the British people have responded to his leadership in a manner that will forever remain one of the brightest pages in their history.

Mr. Churchill's radio address yesterday was as moving and eloquent as any he has ever made. But he directed it primarily to the conquered countries of Europe; to Japan, which is now poised on the eve of a decision that will determine the issue of peace or war in the Western Pacific; and to Americans with whose elected leader he recently conferred at an historic meeting somewhere in the Atlantic. That meeting was the occasion of his address and while he told little about it that had not already been told, the vividness of his description intensified the tremendous symbolical significance of that event. It was, as he pointed out, a reminder to the nations living under Hitler's yoke that a tremendous aggregation of power is being mobilized to achieve their liberation. He bade the conquered peoples to be of good heart in this period of fearful tribulations, to have faith and hope for help is coming and deliverance is sure.

Addressing himself to Japan, he declared categorically that her aggressions must stop. Should the present American efforts to persuade Japan to a course of reason fail, he said, Great Britain will range herself unhesitatingly on the side of the United States. His message for us was less direct but no less fraught with meaning. It came in the form of a warning that Hitler will make war on this country whenever it may suit his purpose to do so. To those aware of the somber realities of the international situation this warning is hardly needed.

Hell's Breath

British troops in Iceland, we are told, have been showing our lads how to adapt themselves to life in the Arctic. This apparently includes making the best of the sad fact that in all Iceland there is but one place where hard liquor may be sold legally—a hotel which is out of bounds for enlisted men. True, there is a canteen in Reykjavik where Scottish pale ale may be purchased and consumed during certain hours. But otherwise the only legal alcoholic beverage on sale is "bjor," a domestic near-beer containing not more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol.

The Tommies have had to put up with this situation for some time now and their solution of the problem has been, inevitably, the invention of extraordinary concoctions variously called the Black Death or Hell's Breath, depending on whether or not one loses one's voice after drinking them.

Naturally the ingredients are secret, though it is whispered that industrial alcohol and coloring matter are prime requisites. At any rate, the drinks are reported to have ruined more British stomachs than the dispensaries like to admit.

This is depressing news and we hate to think of what may happen when the Yanks, who possess more experience in such matters, set out to surpass the British. Perhaps something more palatable and less deadly will be forthcoming—but somehow we're not optimistic. What with a long, cold winter ahead and no prospect of the Icelanders revising their prohibition system, it looks as though the boys may be obliged to fall back on the "boiler-makers" and "screamers" of a decade ago. The outlook, we repeat, is pretty grim. . . .

THE SHAKEN HEART

Within the stillest water shadows move:
A hand, if held aloft, will quiver in
The depths.

The unplumbed, icy, emerald bowl
That hoary mountains clasp against their hearts
Maintains its secret currents that disturb
The stately shadows of the swan-like clouds;
Yes even, looking down, the mountains see
Their outlines shake within the deeps they guard.

There is no summer pool so still upon
A breathless day the leaning birch will find
Its fair reflection perfect, grace for grace.
How calm, how still, the casual glance may think:
But pause and hold a finger up, and see
How trembling is the soul beneath its shade.

Unity Ball

Greatly impressed with the program of the United Service Organization in providing worthwhile health, recreational and entertainment facilities and services to all our boys enlisted and being daily inducted into our country's armed forces: I am proposing (and have been urging the President and others) that we launch a National Unity Ball ("Dine and Dance") festivities to be observed on a nation-wide schedule on the evening and night of November 11, Armistice Day. This event I am sure would enlist the sponsorship and enthusiastic support of the American Legion, the V. F. W., the D. A. R. and other organizations throughout the country, especially should the proposed Armistice Day National Unity Balls be advertised and designed to accrue in benefits not less than a million dollars with which to further extend and finance the U. S. O. program facilities and services to be "invested in our boys" in this and the coming emergency years.

However, the even greater benefits to be derived from the Armistice Day Balls, etc., observance, would be the "Unity" and "spirit of Unity" engendered in the line of National Defense in which we all are vitally concerned.

Defense Progress

The Washington Post is forever increasing its value to subscribers. Without malice, hate or name calling you have portrayed the truths about our defense program so efficiently that far reaching beneficial results are bound to follow. You have really placed a mirror in front of all concerned for them to visualize at once where they stand, and no doubt will hasten constructive action with a will to serve our country intelligently and fruitfully.

Skirts

Having seen in today's issue of The Washington Post an article advising shorter skirts for women, why not advise them to wear the old-time tights and a short shirt-waist or no clothes at all? It is really true, men now have no respect for women, and I am very sorry to add that it is all the women's fault. For heaven's sake, do not make the skirts shorter.

The way women dress now is demoralizing to the older people of the Nation, and is the cause of lots of sex murders. Crimes of all kinds have followed in the wake of shorts and short skirts. I hope Helen Furnas Hall, Associated Press fashion expert, will fight shorter skirts and may she have the help of every right-minded woman in these United States.

Thanks

You are to be congratulated for your contribution to national defense by the merciless publicity started in your front page editorials on "Guns for Soldiers."

It is high time that Knudsen and others responsible be informed that they are lagging way behind the public sentiment in supporting the defense program and instituting public sacrifices for which the people are ready.

If it were not for Leon Henderson, Knudsen would still be cogitating whether to cut auto production 20 per cent or 21 per cent the year after next, instead of 50 per cent now. More power to you!

Kearny Decision

What, in the name of common sense, is the President's Mediation Board thinking of in recommending approval of the so-called "membership maintenance" clause by the President and by the Federal Shipbuilding Co.? The President, as far as we know at the moment, has not yet approved the clause—but I for one would not be even slightly surprised if he does—you can only judge the future by the past.

What is the use of guaranteeing the whole world the so-called "Four Freedoms," and how much does the Government think the whole world will believe the guarantee, when at this moment the working man of the United States is to be sold into the slavery of the racketeers who have taken the unions over from the working man! What kind of freedom is that? Is it the kind that people fight and die for? If so, the world has certainly turned upside down.

And if freedom to pursue one's work—one of the deepest of all freedoms since it implies self-expression—goes by the board, good-by to religious freedom, freedom of the press, and finally every freedom for which Americans are willing to fight and die—and somebody will have achieved one of those delightful bloodless revolutions, although "sneak" revolutions is a better word!

I, for one, never will believe that the morale of our armed forces is low, nor that the morale of plain John and Jane Doe is low. But I do believe that the citizenry of this country is sorely puzzled—what appears to be low morale is nothing more than confusion—we are dizzy—the merry-go-round goes faster and faster, and we are expected to fly off and walk in a straight line. Then, because that is just as impossible mentally as it would be physically, our morale is supposed to be low!

Florida Cross-State Ditch

It is strange indeed that the Florida Cross-State Canal (or "ditch," as it is called anywhere south of Jacksonville), has been favorably reported by Congress. But then almost anything has the right-of-way today, if it is labeled "for defense."

Senator Pepper, the President's "yes man," says it is one of the "must" projects, although at least two-thirds of his constituents believe that the completion of this sea-level canal would ruin their underground water supply.

Many unprejudiced good authorities claim that a cross-State canal over northern Florida is not needed for defense or for any other purpose; that its initial cost to build and maintain would be out of all proportion to any possible benefits.

The first allotment of $5,000,000 for commencing the work was made with the leading "excuse" that it would provide work for idle men. It was an expensive undertaking, but its an ill wind that blows nobody any good, so the tax-payers grinned and thought the unsightly hole in the landscape would make the largest frog pond in the world.

The first estimate of its cost was 115 million dollars, including the initial allotment. A later estimate by the engineers was 142 million dollars, while their last estimate was 162 million dollars. But the chief engineer of one of the principal Florida railroads estimated that the cost would be 366 million dollars for a sea-level canal. Besides, many bridges would have to be built and maintained over a canal, at an added cost of millions.

No shipping company has admitted that they would use this canal if it ever were completed, claiming that no time would be saved by using it because ships would be obliged to navigate it at greatly reduced speed; also that in the hurricane season their ships would be liable to be blown ashore. Strong winds prevail on the edge of hurricanes up as far as middle Florida, where this canal would cross, and no ship captain would want to be cooped up therein at such times, when deep water and plenty of sea room would be had over the old route around Cape Sable, end of the State.

When a Florida cross-State canal or a ship railway was first mentioned, soon after Florida became ours, there was need for one, because the dangerous keys and reefs along the East Coast had not been surveyed by the United States, and ships were obliged to use the old and unreliable Spanish and English charts. Wrecks were frequent between Jacksonville and Key West. More than 260 vessels were wrecked on that coast-line in seven years, valued at $8,194,300. Foreign vessels were not included in these figures. But the stupendous cost prevented an appropriation in those "horse-and-buggy days," so nothing ever was done to prevent the wrecks. Now, with reliable charts and lights comparatively few wrecks occur.

If a canal "must" be dug, the writer suggests that the present practical cross-State waterway now successfully operating between St. Lucie Inlet at Stuart and the Gulf at Punta Rasa, be considered. This now popular waterway could be deepened, widened, and the mileage reduced, at a small fraction of the cost of completing the so-called ditch.

It may surprise Post readers to learn that during the calendar year 1940 61,043 boats used this already completed waterway. Of this number 20,490 were pleasure craft, and 32,914 were fishing and work boats; 4,775 were tugs and barges. Skiffs and outboard boats were not included in the above list.

Justice Murphy

We are perplexed, yes bewildered, by the sudden changes in policies on the part of the Government. The President roundly condemned Stalin for his invasion of Finland, saying 98 per cent of American sympathy was with the Finns.

He officially declared the Soviet Union a dictatorship as absolute as any (referring to Hitler).

Now he declares that the American people are "observing with sympathy and admiration the valiant struggle of the Russians engaged in self-defense."

No word for the Finns attacking Russia in hope of getting back some of the territory robbed from them by Russia.

The people are now requested to change their views, lay aside opinions, and assume the ideas of the state, even as the draftee lays aside his civilian clothes to wear the uniform of the conscript.

It is not a wholesome condition. Frank Murphy, justice of the Supreme Court, allowed himself to be projected into a Catholic convention strong in its opposition to Stalin and communism, where it was understood a resolution was to be adopted, an annual custom, denouncing the Communists and the Soviet Union, just as the President, a year ago.

Murphy was expected not only to stop the resolution, but also if possible to get an indorsement of the President.

The majority of the Catholics in America are conservative, obeying the laws as they obey the rules of the church, with sincere respect for the courts as for their priests.

The appearance of Murphy was a shock to Catholics who believe that the courts should be kept out of politics. He was Father Coughlin in reverse when he dragged the church into politics by his ill-fated adventure in politics.

Assumption Day, 1938

I was awakened by the bells. All over Paris they were chiming peacefully, melodiously—St. Julien, St. Etienne, St. Augustin, St. Germain, Sacre-Coeur, and a host of others, raising their praises to honor Our Lady. Today was the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, at once a great holy day and a holiday. In the early morning the churches would be packed with the faithful and then there would be a long beautiful day of leisure. The roads leading from Paris would be dotted with bicyclists heading for a day in the country. The railroad stations would be crowded with families armed with fishing rods and lunches, going to spend the day on the banks of some pleasant stream. A few stay-at-homes would fill the pleasant parks and an unwonted serenity would descend on the streets of Paris where shuttered shops stared blankly at the passers-by.

I was spending the weekend with Julie in Gilberte's apartment. Gilberte, with many admonitions to her two Americans as to the locking of doors, windows and wardrobes, had departed two days ago for her little chateau in the country.

Julie and I breakfasted on hot chocolate and delicious croissants. From below we could hear Mme. F., the concierge, scolding Frou-Frou. Frou-Frou had undoubtedly been a bad dog again, and misbehaved in the vestibule.

We went first to mass at the Church of St. Augustin. Afterward we decided that we would spend a lazy, aimless day doing only what occurred to us.

Who could have believed war possible that sun-filled day? The chimes of the churches still rang at intervals. All through the day they rang. On the boulevard students lounged and read at the book stalls. In the sidewalk cafes men conversed interminably over their wine. In the Rue Scufflot a sleek cat was taking her daily nap at the base of a statue. The Luxembourg Gardens were alive with color. Children played around the flower beds and ran laughing down the wide paths while their parents or nurses sat watching. There were many fathers here today, too.

Julie and I stuffed ourselves on pastries and waited impatiently for the bell that announced the beginning of the Punch and Judy performance. Finally we heard the tinkle of the bell and children and grown-ups pushed eagerly to the door of the little theater.

The master of ceremonies was a dear old gentleman with a twinkle in his eye. Today, he announced to the children, was a gala day at the Guignol theater, and before Guignol himself appeared the children would sing and then take part in a contest.

How those children sang! One well-loved nursery rhyme after another. One little girl in her very best frock and with her hair tightly curled mounted the stage and sang a solo in a small piping voice. The song was "Dans ma toute petite auto," and every line was illustrated by gestures that her adoring mama had doubtless taught her.

Now for the contest. "The question today," said the master of ceremonies, "is, 'If you should win the grand prize in the lottery, what would you give to your papa as a present?'"

The children were to line up, each would speak, and the audience should decide which child had spoken the best. The first little girl, speaking unhesitatingly, said that she would buy a house in Brittany for her papa. A small boy announced that he would give his father a big boat, and he stretched his arms as far as possible to show how immense it would be. A beautiful little girl who had come with her father looked at him out of the corner of her eye, ducked her head and whispered that she would buy a bag of tobacco for her father with the prize money. Next, oh, shame on her, was a little girl who, lacking an original thought, copied another child. That would never do, and she was sent promptly to the foot of the line. At length the audience was almost unanimous in its choice of a manly little boy, no more than 6, who said he would buy his father a very fine pipe and put it under his napkin at breakfast in order to surprise him. This was the child who had spoken best, and he received his reward.

Now the curtain parted. There was a hush and then the children began to shout. "Guignol," they called. "Guignol, come out." And suddenly up popped the black-capped sardonic face of that incomparable and lovable rascal, Guignol. Guignol, witty, clever, insouciant. Guignol who by turns outwits the gendarme who pursues him or punishes himself for a stupid move by whacking his wooden head against the edge of the stage.

Guignol, pursued hotly by the inspector, hides himself behind a curtain. "You will not tell the inspector that I'm here?" he begs the children in mock distress. No, no, they will never betray Guignol. Now the inspector looms pompous and stern on the scene. "Is Guignol here?" he demands of the audience.

"Non, non!" cry the children. "Il n'est pas la." But it is useless, for the inspector has discovered the end of Guignol's pigtail and the chase is over.

Goodby, Guignol. The children are sorry to see the end and so are we.

Tired, Julie and I started homeward. Back along the quais and over the Seine we rode. Past the massive gray Louvre, the flower-filled Tuileries, the fountains of the Place de la Concorde, along avenues lined with full trees and lavender-gray facades. About Paris there was still an aura of loveliness and peace.

Far away the bells still rang. No one was thinking of war that day in Paris. VALERIE LEMASURIER.

President Camacho

Mexico Behind Him

MEXICO, D. F.—Mexico is a country of cartoons. Cartoons that pierce, that ridicule, dramatize and expose the native characteristics and the native leaders. They are often bitter. They are usually jeering. Once in a great while they have the gentleness of a benediction.

It was a cartoon published recently which placed the nation's blessing upon the brow of President Manuel Avila Camacho. Though every newspaper in the capital carried an editorial on the same subject it was La Prensa's cartoon which best expressed public approval of the President's most important act since his inauguration.

The cartoon shows President Avila Camacho, dressed in a flossy charro suit, strumming a guitar. It is titled "The Popular Muse" and below are printed the words of the song he is singing. "No member of my family, no politician, nor anyone else influences me."

Simple as this sounds it constitutes the new President's declaration of independence. The nation has been waiting for it since his inauguration in December, 1940, and it is of first importance today in view of the opening of the Congress on September 1 and his first annual message to his people on the state of the nation.

TO APPRECIATE its importance it is necessary to dip into the turgid waters of Mexican politics which have flooded the nation since the new administration came in. Doubt and confusion were washed by these waters over the land, swamping the people with distrust when they were hungry for clarity and faith, drenching them with agitation when they were yearning for peace.

No sooner had the President's coalition cabinet been named than the politicos of both camps started taking pot shots at it. The Rightists started rumors that the Leftists would be purged. The Leftists started rumors that the Rightists would last only a month. And so the battle was on, and it has continued until the historic day when President Avila Camacho made his declaration of independence. He is a patient man.

The four names mentioned most frequently as the leaders in this political fracas were the President's brother, Gen. Maximino Avila Camacho, former governor of Puebla State; Emilio Portes Gil, former president; Vincente Lombardo Toledano, the labor leader, and Former President Lazaro Cardenas. Maxicino Avila Camacho and Portes Gil symbolized the Rightist push, though they were not working together. Cardenas still personifies the Leftist program and Lombardo Toledano is its most vociferous defender.

OF THE FOUR MEN the greatest mystery remains Gen. Cardenas. Passionately revered while in office, since his retirement to become a Michoacan farmer, he has been smeared and defamed by the Rightist leaders with a violence which can only be attributed to their fear of his strength. He has endured nine months of this without ever once answering back, continuing serenely on his way and, in spite of accusations to the contrary, keeping his fingers out of the political pie.

Two highly respected men, both intimates of Cardenas, have sworn this to me in exclusive interviews, obtained while the agitation was at its peak. One source, whose accuracy in political affairs has been infallible, elaborated upon the Cardenas position as follows:

"The reason the opposition is trying to smear Cardenas is that they thought with the change of administration Mexico would turn the clock back. They wanted to go back to the days of Don Porfirio with foreign concessions for 99 years and all that nonsense. This kept on for a few months, then they discovered they were fooled and they blame the so-called 'Cardenistas' for blocking them. Their revenge is to attack 'Cardenismo.'

"On the other hand," this spokesman continued, "The Communist-CTM crowd is being fooled too. Cardenas was fed up with Communists a year before he left office and President Avila Camacho has never had any use for them. I don't doubt that they are trying to get control, but they will never do it while Avila Camacho is President. He hates extremes and extremists."

THE ANOMALOUS position of Cardenas, a man not yet 50 years old and a man at the very height of his vigor who has retired from six years of daring and aggressive leadership to a complete withdrawal from national affairs, was explained by his friend in these terms:

"It is hard for Mexicans, or foreigners either, to understand Cardenas' role. They are so used to continuismo (staying in office). They won't really believe that he is out of politics, but he is. Cardenas feels that his public work is done, that he made his place in history, good or bad. Now his program must stand or fall on its merits. He will do nothing to push it. And if reforms are needed he trusts President Avila Camacho to make them."

This is exactly what President Avila Camacho has done, initiate reforms to bring the uncompromising Cardenas program into harmony with the national realities. But it must be clearly understood that these reforms were not reversals and that is where the rub comes, for the conservative extremists wanted a black out of the whole liberal program. They are and were disgruntled that they had not been able to maneuver the new president into a sharp swing to the Right. Leftists, meanwhile, have been whimpering about the needed reforms.

This storm of attack and counter-attack, all directed toward the opening of the Congress and replete with rumors of drastic cabinet changes, was having such a demoralizing effect upon public opinion and confidence that the President was at last forced to act. In a decisive 117-word statement he declared that all of his acts are governed by the Constitution and the laws of the land, adding significantly that:

"Neither any member of my family nor any person outside the administration has, or will have, any part in the decision made in the exercise of my powers."

THIS PUT a quietus on both ambitious Rightists and Leftists and La Prensa accompanied its cartoon of "The Popular Muse" with an editorial stating that "never in the history of the country have fewer words been necessary to cause such a profound national effect as the 117 words in the Presidential declaration."

The President's brother answered this obvious reference to him and his influence with a public statement that he offers his services if they are needed, or will refrain from taking any part in public affairs "if this will benefit the country and the first magistrate of the republic." Lombardo Toledano, for once, had nothing to say.

During the same week that this dramatic exchange of public statements between the two Avila Camacho brothers occurred, the Banco Internacional, S. A., opened its doors in the impressive new Guardiola Building. It is one of four new banks opening in Mexico City during the month of August. The 50-year-old Monterey Iron & Steel Foundry put on the market a 7,500,000-peso bond issue. The tourist trade is booming. Local businessmen report sales are excellent, collections coming in rapidly. And Minister of Finance Eduardo Suarez forecasts a happy surprise on national income when the President reads his message to the Congress on September 1.

If foreign diplomats and political analysts had only believed the truth Hitler was telling in "Mein Kampf," as early as 1926, the picture of the world today would perhaps not be so grim. If foreign capitalists, and particularly the oil companies' officials, had studied the program which Lazaro Cardenas put into effect as governor of Michoacan, long before coming to the presidency, it is likely that the unnecessary impasse of the expropriation would never have taken place.

PRESIDENT AVILA CAMACHOS past record is likewise available for all to read and it makes clear the mistake of trying to force him into a corner or impel him to sidestep from the middle of the road, where he is firmly planted. His record for the past 20 years is that of a harmonizer, of a man who can bring warring elements or personalities into a creative peace. Moreover, he is not the type of man to alter his methods or his record at this stage of his career.

Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho is deliberate, solid, peace-loving and persuasive. He promised when he came into office that he would govern for all of the people. He is trying to do that. His minister of the interior, Licenciado Miguel Aleman, speaking in the name of the President, recently promised the reviving Regional Confederation of Mexican Labor, the rival of Lombardo Tolendano's C. T. M., that the new administration will give equal consideration to all labor groups, a definitely moderate commitment.

"President Avila Camacho," said one of his cabinet members recently, "is trying to follow the middle way. It's the hardest way, because then neither extremists are pleased, those of the Right or the Left. But he is determined to follow it and to curb the radicals on both sides."

It may be that the extremists are not pleased, but the public is overjoyed, La Prensa's cartoon tells the story. He is now "The Popular Muse."

The Eight Great Points

By Mark Sullivan

A Review

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT last week amplified the Eight Points. The amplifying was really a correction—the supplying of something the original points had omitted. For light on what happened, and on where we now stand, let us review the whole history of this document, not yet two weeks old.

SULLIVAN

The Eight Points came to America Thursday, August 14, over the radio, through a speech delivered in London by a member of the British government. Simultaneously, copies of the document, as drawn up at sea by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, were given to newspaper men at the White House by Secretary Early.

There followed what has come to be standard practice in America's treatment of documents and events. Within an hour newspapers began asking public men, especially Congressmen, for opinions. Many complied. Newspaper editors throughout the country wrote editorials. Summaries of the editorials, and of the statements by public men, appeared in the newspapers of larger cities on Friday morning, some 20 hours after receipt of the document. This hurried assembling was looked upon as being the country's reaction to the Eight Points.

THE FOLLOWING DAY, President Roosevelt arrived in Maine from his sea conference with Mr. Churchill. To newspaper and radio men who met him, he dwelt comparatively little on the Eight Points, more on the dramatic and historical aspect of his sea conference.

Two days later, four days after emergence of the Eight Points, Mr. Roosevelt at the White House received leaders of Congress. He talked with them for some hour and a half. The leaders, on leaving the White House, practiced toward newspapermen what seemed a prearranged silence.

Wednesday evening, August 20, Mr. Roosevelt, at the White House, wrote in his own hand, with a pencil on a pad, a message to Congress. When read in Congress the next day, comment dwelt upon its brevity. There was curiosity as to why the message had been sent. Three-fourths of it was a mere repetition of the Eight Points document.

Other than the Eight Points document itself, the message to Congress contained only a few brief paragraphs, nearly all perfunctory. Persons who put their minds on the President's reason for sending the message, felt they found it, as often in such cases, in the closing paragraph. This read:

"It is also unnecessary for me to point out that the declaration of principles includes of necessity the world need for freedom of religion and freedom of information. No society of the world organized under the announced principles could survive without these freedoms which are a part of the whole freedom for which we strive."

THIS, surmise said, was the the real reason for Mr. Roosevelt's message. Freedom of religion and of information (that is, press and speech) had been omitted from the original Eight Points. The omissions were conspicuous, because two other freedoms had been specifically mentioned—"freedom from want and fear."

All four freedoms had been mentioned by Mr. Roosevelt in a speech last winter—"the four freedoms" had been a slogan during several months. Omission of two from the Eight Points had led to speculation about the reason. Had they been omitted as a gesture toward Stalin, to whom the omitted freedoms—religion and press and opinion—must be embarrassing?

All this had led to criticism from several sources. The criticism had been called to Mr. Roosevelt's attention by the Congressman whom he had conferred with. It was to meet this criticism, according to the surmise, that Mr. Roosevelt wrote his message to Congress, specifically mentioning freedom of religion and of information as an addendum to the Eight Points.

In the message to Congress, there was just one other paragraph that had any importance. It may not have had significance to Mr. Roosevelt as he wrote it, but it has significance now. The paragraph read, in part:

"The declaration of principles (the Eight Points) . . . is so clear-cut that it is difficult to oppose in any major particular without automatically admitting a willingness to accept compromise with naziism . . ."

HERE WAS Mr. Roosevelt saying that the Eight Points document is so clear cut as to be sacrosanct from criticism, that any who oppose it do so because they are willing to compromise with naziism. And here was Mr. Roosevelt, in the same breath, adding an addendum and explanation to the document!

For the humor of this, the country can be grateful, in a time when humor is a scarce and cherished commodity. But after we have enjoyed our smile, we had best give serious and sympathetic thought to the Eight Points. Neither in inspiration nor in authority can we assume that the document Mr. Roosevelt brought back from the sea is as the one Moses brought down from the mountain.

The Eight Points is a momentous document, freighted with high hopes and great responsibilities. If either it lacks something, or implies more than is workable, it will be improved and made practicable by free and sympathetic discussion.

The Kearny Strike

By Ernest K. Lindley

A Ticklish Situation

THE KEARNY, N. J., shipyards strike is, in its public and psychological features, one of the most ticklish to have been put up to the President. On the cold facts, however, responsible Government officials feel that the situation has been widely misrepresented.

In the beginning, they point out, there is an important difference between a zone standards agreement and a collective bargaining contract.

The zone standards agreement was the understanding between the East Coast shipyards and labor, brought about by direct intervention of the Government. It was similar to the agreement on the West Coast achieved late last spring. Such an agreement, in the view of the Government, is not a final and complete contract. It is, rather, a framework or a foundation, containing the things in which the Government is directly interested. One of these is that there shall be no strikes, and the other is the labor cost of ships: both of which mean that basic wage rates must be fixed.

AFTER GETTING an agreement on these essentials, the Government, in effect, withdrew—both on the West Coast and later on the East Coast. This left the way clear for the unions and management to fill out the framework by collective bargaining. On the West Coast, 38 of the 39 shipyards subscribed to a closed shop contract with the 20 unions involved. The holdout was Bethelem Steel.

Later, when Bethlehem Steel was struck, the National Defense Mediation Board recommended that Bethlehem get in line with the other 38 and accept the closed shop. Because of its importance as a precedent this recommendation was reviewed by the entire Defense Mediation Board. Only one member dissented, the others feeling that as a minority of one Bethlehem should not hold out against a region-wide closed shop agreement.

On the East Coast, likewise, the Government left to labor and management the filling out of the zone standards agreement. Here, however, the union picture is spottier than in the West. Some companies do not have regular collective bargaining. A master contract, such as was achieved on the Pacific Coast, was impracticable.

At the Kearny yards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., the union—a CIO affiliate—felt that it should have some protection. Under the zone standards agreement it was surrendering for two years the right to strike. It did not have a closed shop understanding with the management. It knew that the yards were to be expanded rapidly, resulting in the hiring of many new workers. It feared that at the end of two years the union would have melted away.

THE MEDIATION BOARD agreed with the union's contention: that if wage rates were to be fixed and the right to strike suspended for two years, it should have some protection. It recommended, not the closed shop but a union maintenance clause, which is two or three steps lower down the ladder of union protective devices. Under this clause no man is compelled to join the union, but anyone who already belongs to it or joins it later must continue to pay dues during the life of the contract. If he doesn't, the employer must discharge him.

The union, aspiring to the greater security of the closed shop, twice voted down the Mediation Board's proposal. On reconsideration it accepted the plan. The management balked.

The zone standards agreement has been widely portrayed as a complete contract, subscribed to by management, labor and the Government. This is not so, by the official view: it is merely the base for collective bargaining contracts. Until the latter are signed, according to the official view, the union's only moral obligation is not to strike until it has exhausted peaceful remedies. The union, they hold, lived up to this obligation.

WHEN THE PRESIDENT returned to his desk a week ago he found a recommendation that the Government take over the Kearny yards because of the refusal of the management to accept the Defense Mediation Board's proposal. It was presented by the Mediation Board and subscribed to by Sidney Hillman, codirector of OPM, Secretary of the Navy Knox and Admiral Land, of the Maritime Commission. Again, as in the Bethlehem case on the West Coast, the case had been reviewed by the entire Mediation Board. And again, it is understood, only one member dissented.

The President hesitated to act. He brought in Myron Taylor, former head of U. S. Steel, which controls the Federal Shipbuilding Co. He requested the management and the union to make a final effort to get together.

The difference between a zone standards agreement, drawn under the auspices and pressure of the Government, and a collective bargaining contract may seem technical and obscure to the layman. But it is clear to the Government officials involved. Apparently without important exception, they have fixed the blame on the management.

Can The Russians Hold Out?

By Barnet Nover

Winter And The War In The East

HITLER attacked Russia because the presence on Germany's eastern flank of a large and powerful force immobilized no less than a third of the Luftwaffe and almost half the German army. The Fuehrer admitted as much in his proclamation of June 22 when he declared that the concentration of Russian troops on the German border brought about "the tying-up of such powerful German forces in the East that the radical conclusion of the war in the West, particularly as regards aircraft, could no longer be vouched for by the German High Command."

NOVER

There were other reasons, too. There was the belief that an attack on Russia would enable Germany to capitalize the strong anti-Communist feelings that exist in most countries and thus, at one and the same time, create a division in the ranks of Germany's enemies and provide a center of cohesion for the "new order." And it can hardly be doubted that Russian resources of oil and wheat and manganese and other essentials proved a will o' the wisp that lured Hitler on. Military considerations were dominant, however, and since the beginning of the fighting in the East the chief aim of the Nazi war machine has been to smash the Red army as a fighting force.

NINE WEEKS have now elapsed since that struggle began. In that time, according to the Nazis, the Russians have lost five million men, 14,000 tanks, 12,000 planes, 50,000 cannon and a considerable stretch of territory including points of considerable industrial importance. Yet there appears to be no sign that Russia is anywhere near the end of her rope.

Everywhere the Nazis are meeting with fierce resistance. Odessa, now practically surrounded on three sides, continues to hold out. Orders have been issued to defend Leningrad foot by foot, if that should prove necessary. And while the German armies have begun to renew their drive in the central sector progress this is at nowhere like a blitzkrieg pace.

In the meantime, the Russian campaign has proved the most costly in men and materiel in which the Nazi war machine has ever engaged. According to Winston Churchill between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 Germans have been killed in the fighting on the Eastern Front. Even if that figure is discounted, as all figures of losses incurred in the Russo-German war must be discounted, all available evidence indicates that the Nazis have paid heavily for their thus far inconclusive gains. Yet German losses in men and materiel, whatever they are, do not yet appear to have reached the point where the Nazi war machine is in danger of being stalled for lack of men or materiel.

On the other hand, while the Russians have put up a magnificent fight, it is apparent from what has been happening on various fronts of the far-flung battle line that their offensive capacity, limited to begin with in comparison with the German war machine, has been further reduced by the severe losses which they have suffered these last nine weeks.

THIS CIRCUMSTANCE must be kept in mind in weighing alternatives that would face Hitler should the war in Russia drag into winter.

American correspondents have recently been sending out stories indicating that such a winter campaign is being envisaged by the German high command. The fact that the censors permitted such stories to get out creates the suspicion that the Nazis are trying to arouse an optimistic mood in the United States and elsewhere and in that way bring about a slackening of our rearmament effort on behalf of the enemies of the Third Reich.

There is a real point in this contention. Yet unless Hitler's war machine can make much greater progress in the next six weeks than it has in the past six weeks, winter may find the German armies in Russia still far from their goal.

If that proves to be the case, Hitler will have suffered a real setback. But with Russia's offensive capacity gravely impaired by the losses she has suffered thus far, and American and British aid likely to be limited for a long time to come, there would be nothing to prevent Hitler from assuming the defensive in Russia during the winter months and holding the extended battle line with a minimum number of men. Enough men and materiel could then be released by the German high command for operations in other theaters of war.

AN INVASION of England this year is no longer feasible. The time for that was squandered by the Reich on the plains of Russia. But a move through Turkey to Iraq, and Iran, through the Ukraine and the Black Sea to the Caucasus, through Spain to Gibraltar, or North Africa to Dakar can by no means be ruled out.

It is a tragic circumstance that, though nine weeks have elapsed since the bulk of Hitler's armies and air force were hurled against Russia, the British are not yet strong enough to create a real Western Front. What they have done by way of aerial attacks on the Reich has been useful to Russia and may contribute to Hitler's ultimate undoing. But these raids have proved insufficient to do more than slow up the German drive in Russia.

They have not halted the German war machine. Yet the opportunity which the Russian war has presented Great Britain is not likely to occur again. On the contrary, should Germany defeat Russia, the destruction of the last great enemy on the European Continent would enable Hitler, as Churchill has again reminded us, to hurl Germany's full weight against Great Britain. This grim possibility the Russians have postponed. But it cannot be assumed that their fighting strength will continue to be equal to their courage and determination.

2 Win Fellowships At Carnegie Tech

THE FIRST YEAR OF DEFENSE

by

I. F. STONE

WASHINGTON EDITOR OF "THE NATION" SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT FOR "P.M."

This first account of the first year of defense cuts into the fog of reassuring statement and shocking disclosure to subject America's rearmament program to sharp observation and biting analysis. Its swift summary of the facts and its well documented exposures are as exciting as a detective story. Why is there a shortage of aluminum? Are we prepared to defend America? What are the obstacles to full mobilization of our productive capacity? What steps can be taken to speed the defense program? Here are the answers. Senator Truman, of Missouri, who heads the Senate's investigation into national defense, says, "This is the first book to show the way in which monopoly practices and big business control hamper mobilization of America's resources for defense. The statement of the facts in this book is absolutely essential in the public interest." Recommended to the thoughtful citizen anxious to learn the truth about defense. Price $2.00

MERRELL C. DOUGHERTY, of Green Meadows, Md., a new subdivision in Prince Georges County, says: "I like the idea of a pictorial supplement because I agree with the saying that one picture is worth a thousand words." His wife concurs, as their boy, Michael, 7½ months, looks on

'It's Got Everything,' Readers Say

A 'Great Little Magazine,' Is Consensus of Many Compliments

Parade, The Post's new 32-page Sunday feature section, went over in a big way yesterday in the Washington area. From all sections of the city, and its suburbs—from old and young, from Government worker and private worker—from civilians and from service men—came expressions of approval.

"It's got everything, and we think it's great," was the general sentiment.

A Post photographer and reporter who toured metropolitan Washington for comments on Parade were swamped with compliments for the new Sunday section.

SENATOR Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, had this to say: "I was very much interested in Parade, and was impressed by the variety of its timely articles. It will certainly make a hit."

Said Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Democratic Senator from Florida: "It's terrific! It covers so many things, and has wonderful pictures."

DISTRICT Acting Chief of Police Edward J. Kelly was also enthusiastic about Parade. "This addition to The Post is very comprehensive and interesting," he said, "and I am sure that it will be read and appreciated by everybody."

Harry Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, liked Parade's style and make-up. "It's very good," he asserted, "and with its up-to-date articles and pictures, will certainly be a success."

"It has everything in one," commented Mary Daidone, 1606 Allison Street Northwest, typist for the HOLC. "I think it's one of the most interesting feature sections I've ever seen." Her mother, Mrs. A. Daidone, of the same address, agreed. "There are some wonderful pictures in it," she added.

Joseph Reynolds, 3424 Thirteenth Street Northwest, retired Navy man, was especially interested in Parade's story about how R. A. F. pilots are trained. "It's a great little magazine," he said enthusiastically.

ANOTHER reader favored an article on China by Ernest Hemingway. She is Margaret C. Seaman, 1363 Otis Place Northwest, a clerk in the Quartermaster Corps of the War Department. "It's so well written, and has such good pictures with it," was her reaction.

J. W. Biller from Martinsburg, W. Va., who was visiting Miss Seaman, thought Parade was "swell." "We don't have anything like it back home, but I can get The Post there," he said.

Three soldiers from Fort Belvoir, who were standing on the street reading Parade, had this to say:

"An all-around paper, it's got everything from sports to war news; I like it," stated Corpl. Melvin R. DeGrasse, who comes from Bangor, Me.

"It's a swell size and easy to handle," commented Corpl. Chester A. Jablonoski, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

"It's O. K. by me, with all those pictures of pretty girls," said Private John D. Weigley, of Richland, Pa.

BUT the Army was not the only military unit that approved Parade. The Navy, too, gave the new Sunday feature section a welcome greeting.

"It's darn good material—really down to life, and I think that everybody will like it," said First Class Seaman Robert L. Wasson, on leave from the U. S. S. Texas.

"You can ditto that for me," added James F. Hartman, First Class Seaman on leave from the U. S. S. Wasp.

From women readers came more compliments for Parade.

"I think it has everything from soup to nuts, and is much better than the weekly picture magazines," Irene Trytiak, 3719 Jenifer Street, Chevy Chase, a stenographer in the Civil Service Commission, told a Post reporter.

Her friend, Genevieve Gryniewski, 633 Eighth Street Northeast, also a typist in the Civil Service Commission, felt that Parade would be "of interest to old and young, because it has so many different kinds of items."

GENEVIEVE'S two sisters, Helen and Elizabeth, visiting here from Baltimore, were equally enthusiastic.

More pointed comment came from Miss Betty Thobe, also of 633 Eighth Street Northeast, Miss Gryniewski's roommate. "I can see where Genevieve and I will be fighting every Sunday morning to see who gets Parade first," she said.

At Hyattsville, Md., two old-time Post subscribers expressed their hearty approval of Parade. Justice of the Peace John J. Fainter, 38 Wine Avenue, said he enjoyed the new supplement and compared it favorably with "most any popular picture magazine."

B. Edward McCann, of 33 Johnson Avenue, dog-tax collector and former Hyattsville fire marshal, declared: "I subscribe to The Post and enjoy it a lot. I think this new picture supplement makes the paper more interesting than ever."

MERRELL C. DOUGHERTY, of Green Meadows, Md., a new subdivision in nearby Prince Georges County, had this to say in praise of Parade:

"It's a very nice feature—easy to read and very entertaining. I like the idea of a pictorial supplement because I agree with the saying that one picture is worth a thousand words."

Two 16-year-old school girls, Lois Wellington, of 218 Spruce Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and her next-door neighbor, Betty Harris, were engrossed in The Sunday Post when the reporter arrived.

"Sure, I've read Parade," Lois said. "I guess I liked the tennis story best because I play quite a bit of tennis myself."

Betty was enthusiastic, too. "I think Parade is almost as good as The Post's funny papers," she observed.

MRS. BETTY SCOTT, 4200 Henderson Road, Buckingham Village, Va., said she had read Parade "all the way through and enjoyed it a lot." Her husband, Hoyle, agreed.

Policeman Jack Rush, of 1612 King Street, Alexandria, said he was a regular reader of The Post. "I have always liked the paper and I think this magazine section makes it even more interesting," he declared.

Enjoy Parade Every Sunday In The Post

MRS. BETTY SCOTT, 4200 Henderson Road, Buckingham Village, Arlington, Va., says she "enjoyed it a lot." "The pictures were okay," her husband, Hoyle, agrees

"IT'S A great little magazine," says Joseph Reynolds, retired Navy man, reading Parade

"I'M GOING to read it regularly; it's so well written and has such good pictures," is the reaction of Margaret C. Seaman, clerk in the Quartermaster Corps of the War Department. Her guest, J. W. Biller, of Martinsburg, W. Va., agrees

POLICEMAN Jack Rush, of 1612 King Street, Alexandria, said he was a regular reader of The Post. "I have always liked the paper, and I think this magazine section makes it even more interesting," he declares

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Movies' Happiest Season' The Loew Houses Call It

Flippancy, Frivolity and Fun to Mark Films; A Bargain Opening at the National Tonight; News Notes and Items of Gossip of Theater

THE LOEW INTERESTS evidently thought we didn't believe what we said he said a week ago, when we quoted the itinerant Mr. Barrett Kiesling, of M-G-M, as confirmed in the belief that the new season of the cinema will be marked by greater flippancy than usual. So they come along with a statement from Joseph R. Vogel, in charge of all Loew theaters, in corroboration.

MICKEY ROONEY

"The 1941-42 season will be characterized by entertainment in a lighter vein—more comedies, more musicals, more frivolous romances. And, if you insist, you may use the word 'escapist' as the trend of the day," says Mr. Vogel.

Of course, there will be a certain meed of serious and substantial drama to leaven the increased measure of frivolity. That is pretty conclusively indicated by the first bookings for the new semester in the Loew houses on F Street. "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" will inaugurate the new schedule of releases at the Capitol, come Thursday. At the Palace, on the same day, Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner will break out the new screen version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." "Dr. Jekyll," as everybody must know by now, is no laughing matter. The Andy Hardy item, on the other hand, presumably is. In addition to all the regulars of the Hardy Family films, it will introduce the pyrotechnic Patricia Dane and the young tapster, Ray McDonald. But that is only the beginning.

Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland are teamed in "Babes on Broadway;" Clark Gable and Lana Turner combine their talents for the first time in "Honky-Tonk," and Jeanette MacDonald, Brian Aherne and Gene Raymond will be coming along in a new musical version of "Smilin' Thru." "Shadow of the Thin Man," naturally, will costar William Powell and Myrna Loy; "Lady Be Good," already penciled in for September 4, at Loew's Capitol, will present Eleanor Powell, Ann Sothern, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore and Red Skelton; Shirley Temple will return to the screen in "Kathleen." Don't go 'way.

Ann Sothern, Red Skelton and George Murphy are at work on the film version of "Panama Hattie" and Nelson Eddy will have a new partner in Rise Stevens, of the Metropolitan Opera—and Washington's Inaugural Gala—in "The Chocolate Soldier."

So far, we haven't got off the M-G-M lot. United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount are still making pictures for Washington release in the Loew houses, too. Their respective features closest to eye are "New Wine" starring Ilona Massey; Sonja Henie, in "Sun Valley Serenade"—snowballed into August fame—and Technicolored Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall in "Aloma of the South Seas." The Loew people are calling it "The Movies' Happiest Season." They might be right.

Washington Gets a Bargain

Capital theatergoers lining up to the right at the box-office to buy seats for "The Wookey," opening the new season at the National Theater tonight, will be getting a break. The Broadway opening night of Edgar Selwyn's production of Frederick Hazlitt Brennan's new play, with Edmund Gwenn in the title role, is scaled up to a $4 top, with a $3 scale in force thereafter. For the premiere week of the new play on E Street, admissions hit their ceiling at $2. Same play, same cast—half price!

There will be another "premiere" in town on Wednesday night, too. On that night at 8:15, in Central High School Auditorium, Harry S. Bell's "Yard-Bird Revue," first of the units sponsored by the entertainment committee of the District Defense Council to be accorded a public preview, will be presented. Tickets for this training camp production are on sale at Room 500, District Building; the Force School, the A. A. A. and the Defense Council's Information Booth, at Thirteenth-and-a-Half Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, on Post Square . . . Phil Hayden, in charge of the second unit to get going, is in the market for a couple of novelty acts—a good roller-skating turn, or something like that. Applicants should register either at Room 500, District Building, or at the Hayden Dance Studios, on Dupont Circle, but at once.

A Big Day at Glen Echo

The Civitan Club, of Bethesda, Md., will celebrate Montgomery County Day at Glen Echo Park on Friday. Proceeds of this great day at the amusement center will be devoted to the erection of Boy Scout buildings at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center. Books of tickets to the 50-odd amusements are on sale throughout the county . . . Because of a collision of booking dates, the Artie Shaw Dance, in the Arabian Ballroom at Riverside Stadium, has been set back a day from September 17 to September 18 . . . Through a spirit almost as indefatigable as Britain's, the Earle Roxyettes have whipped their "V" for victory" number into shape for presentation on the stage, beginning Friday.

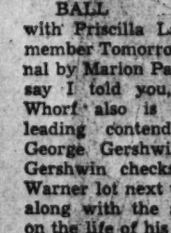
Warner Warps In To The Whorf

Hollywood, Aug. 24 (INS).—Richard Whorf, Warner's triple-threat genius (he writes, directs, acts and is good to little children) is out of "Bridges Built at Night," because Jack Warner has more ambitious plans for him. First, he will be teamed with Priscilla Lane in "Remember Tomorrow," an original by Marion Parsonet. Don't say I told you, but young Whorf also is the current leading contender for the George Gershwin role. Ira Gershwin checks in on the Warner lot next week to help along with the script, based on the life of his late brother, and if they'll pardon my jumping the gun, I think Whorf is set for the part.



LUCILLE BALL

This will probably be a blow to John Garfield who has had his heart set on playing Gershwin since he first heard the studio was planning to film it. I saw Whorf with Lunt and Fontanne when he set the critics raving, and he is all Warners say he is.

Red-headed Maria Montez, who has had more night club publicity than movie roles, is going to get a picture at long last at Universal where they've been secretly grooming her. She will be the big attraction on a South Sea island in a little number called "White Savage," with Brian Donlevy, Brod Crawford and Andy Devine paying court to her. The whole thing sounds a little on the Dorothy Lamour side—particularly after I heard six leopards had been rounded up to snarl and snap at Maria.

The last time I saw Lucille Ball she was crying her eyes out on Ventura Boulevard because a negligent driver had crashed into the back of her brand new station wagon and wrecked it. Well, Lucille has reason to smile today because she's going back to her first love, musicals, in "Hit the Deck," in which she will be the singing and dancing star. Personally, I like Mrs. Desi Arnaz far better in musicals than in the heavier things she attempted for a while. "Hit the Deck" made $3,000,000 when RKO filmed it the first time, which may be one reason they're reviving all the old tunes, including "Hallelujah!"

A New Combination of Rousing, Romantic Talents

CLARK GABLE AND LANA TURNER

Tonk" will be Frank Morgan, Claire Trevor, Albert Dekker, Marjorie Main and Chill Wills—tion of "Honky-Tonk." Miss Turner is rising rapidly. She soon will be seen, also, with Spencer Tracy in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Featured with the stars in the cast of "Honky-Tonk" will be Frank Morgan, Claire Trevor, Albert Dekker, Marjorie Main and Chill Wills—quite a likely group for a "Western"

Mr. Cowan Hits The Jackpot!

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 24. Lester Cowan is one gambler who's hit the jack-pot. When Gilbert Miller was holding the play "Ladies in Retirement" for $250,000, Leslie went to Miller, without a bean, and persuaded him to let him handle it. Lester brought it out here, sold it to Columbia with the understanding that he would produce, Columbia to foot the bills and Cowan and Miller to share in the take.

IDA LUPINO

Now they claim a smash hit, and Miller, who was a little dubious about the filming, is delighted with it. Some think the picture's better than the play. For one thing, the part played by Ida Lupino (who, I understand, gives a terrific performance) is given better motivation for the murder, than in the play, thus making her part more sympathetic.

Well, well—our speedboat enthusiasts and yachting sportsmen are about to come into their own. The Navy's inviting them to enlist in Class M-2 of the Merchant Marine Reserve, where they'll man the small, rugged Navy patrol boats in charge of the protection of Los Angeles Harbor and the Southern California coast. They'll be exempt from selective service and demobilized at the conclusion of the crisis. At least, that's what we're informed by a handsome officer in navy blue and gold who walked in here the other morning and made biscuits out of the entire office force!!!

At the mouth of Topango Canyon, there's a colony of actors and they call the place "Junior Malibu." The Vincent Prices and Louis Haywards have cottages with balconies facing the sea. And during their after-dinner coffee they chat back and forth to each other, and got in the habit of calling out whenever a woman walked by on the beach, "There goes Garbo!" Last week one night just at dusk, when a woman strolled past, they repeated this—then looked suddenly at the woman, and begolly, it WAS Garbo! They ran indoors as guilty as a couple of young kids who had tied tin cans to puppies' tails.

Also at the same spot last Saturday morning at 10 o'clock was Corpl. Jimmy Stewart, in a dinner jacket, with his pants rolled up, surf-fishing with the rest of the tourists. Nobody seems to know yet whose house guest he was, but he was having a whale of a time, even though he wasn't catching anything.

Rita Hayworth took off for San Francisco to vacation with her husband before starting her next picture, "Eadie Was a Lady" . . . They don't see 'em—they just make 'em. Walter Pidgeon hasn't yet seen "Blossoms in the Dust," nor Jimmy Cagney "Bride Came C. O. D." But Edward Everett Horton tops them both—he's NEVER seen himself on the screen.

Paramount has three letters from three young Spanish girls, each claiming to be the original of Ernest Hemingway's "Maria" in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." One is from Barcelona, one from Logrono and one from Madrid, each insisting the entire story was part of her own personal experience, and each claming the tiny scar on her scalp, where the razor nicked Maria when her head was shaved by the Fascisti. Only one of them, the Maria from Logrono, claims acquaintance with Hemingway.

First stop Brenda Frazier made after hitting town was the "Ball of Fire" set, to visit Gary Cooper. Nope, "Shipwreck" Kelly wasn't with her . . . Clark Gable and Carole left a sneak preview of "Honky Tonk" just before the final love scenes to avoid the crowd, but it didn't do 'em a bit of good 'cause they ran smack into a mob of autograph hounds in the lobby.

Clarence Brown tried to get overseas in the last war, but they kept him home the whole time as a flying instructor at Kelly Field. This time he's taking no chances on missing the excitement—he's going to England to make pictures under fire . . . Paramount's paging Lorenzo Barcelata to make a personal appearance at the New York opening of "Hold Back the Dawn."

Gayety Opens New Season To Capacity

Ushering in what promises to be a banner season for burlesque, the Gayety Theater yesterday afternoon presented "Follies of 1941", featuring Vickie Welles and the one and only Mike Sachs, to a capacity crowd.

Manager Bernie Ferber can well be proud of his opening bill. From the playing of the National Anthem to the grand and lavish finale, the production is replete with laughter, tuneful music and pretty girls.

First of the circuit's beauties to appear here is Vickie Welles, a titian-haired lass who is rapidly becoming a local favorite. Wearing some unusually startling gowns, Vickie offers several musical specialities that rank among the best to be found.

In Mike Sachs and Allc Kennedy, the revue has one of the best comedy teams in burlesque. Famous for his "mugging", Sachs offers many of his laugh-provoking numbers, including the well-known "St. James Infirmary" skit, tops in laughs. Bobby Vail, another amusing chap, also adds much to the comedy.

Completing a cast of fine performers are Diane Johnson and Gloria Dahl, beauty specialists; Wen Miller and Denny Lyons, character men; Joyce Brazelle, who exhibits some nifty acrobatic numbers, and the Nathano Brothers, two musical tumblers who all but "stop" the show.

The settings and lighting effects of the curcent production hint of musical comedy magic, while the "line girls" prove both youthful and well trained in their various and colorful dance numbers. Incidentally, the management of the house is to be complimented on the many changes last season. All in all, newcomers and "regulars" may anticipate some great entertainment at the Ninth Street house this season. ART JOHN.

Recent Events Fully Covered At Trans-Lux

It is your first opportunity to see detailed pictures of America's "Gibraltar of the Pacific," as pictures of the Philippines on the alert are unfolded at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week. This camera-record from the far Pacific shows Uncle Sam's steel wall on its toes—underground, on the sea and in the air.

Real war-time scenes come from Brooklyn, as thousands of United States troops land after Southern maneuvers with the Marines. Also from Brooklyn come pictures of the terrific ship and pier fire that snuffed out many lives and injured hundreds. The fine news section is also highlighted with such subjects at battle maneuvers at Fort Jackson, S. C.; O. P. M. Director Knudsen inspecting new Curtis plant at Buffalo; first United States tanker off to Russia with thousands of barrels of gasoline; first cargo ship launched at Richmond, Calif., for the British; British fliers receiving their diplomas from the Governor of Florida at Lakeland training school;

Britain's "Beaufighters"

Britain's largest plane factory is shown turning out the much-heralded "Beaufighters," equipped with three cannon and six machine guns; Lord and Lady Mountbatten, arriving by clipper at New York, where his Lordship will assume command of a large British ship now in repair dock; England's bumper crop of wheat; Petain, resting on the Riviera, and New Zealand's air forces crossing the New Zealand "Alps." There is a Girl Scout jamboree at Otis, Mass., attended by Mrs. Roosevelt; fiesta at Santa Barbara and soap box derby at Akron, Ohio.

The sports world brings rough water swim at Lajolla, Calif.; speedboat records broken at Seattle and Lou Nova training for his bout with Louis.

"The Battle" is an excellent picture of Uncle Sam's Navy in honest-to-goodness action. "The Isles of Fate" is a fine travelog, taking you to Martinique, Barbados and Trinidad. A screwy sport subject hails from Florida with press agents at the helm, and "Donald's Dog Laundry," a very funny cartoon, completes the program.

Labor Day Weekend To See General Exodus

Many Planning Trips Over Last Major Holiday Until Thanksgiving; Canada Is Drawing Many From Here This Year

No matter how often people stanchly say, "But I like Washington in the summer," sooner or later, when the opportunity comes, they all get out of town as fast as possible. Labor Day will see the biggest exodus yet, as this is the last big holiday before Thanksgiving. Then, too, as it always falls on a Monday, Labor Day affords an excellent opportunity for a long weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet will be among those heading for Long Island—Oyster Bay is their destination. Also Long Island-bound will be John Hamilton Baker, who will join Mrs. Baker at Southampton.

This attractive couple are among the many who will live in Washington this winter, here for defense work. Mr. Baker is associated with a well-known shipyard corporation and was transferred to the Capital several months ago. He has been sharing a house on Foxhall Road with several other bachelors while Mrs. Baker remains on Long Island.

She is the former Miss Audrey Jaeckel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Jaeckel, of New York and Southampton, and is one of the attractive younger married women of Manhatton. Her husband is the godson of Gen. William Mason Wright, of Washington, and on Southampton weekends this summer he and his wife have been seeing something of Mrs. Jerauld Wright, the former Phyllis Thompson, daughter-in-law of the general. Mrs. Wright is summering in Southampton with her parents, the Phillips B. Thompsons, of New York, while her husband does sea duty.

Many From D. C. In Canada

What with Europe closed for foreign travel, Canada is coming into its own as a resort center this summer. Leading the Capital vacationists there are the former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, who have been summering at Jasper Lodge, in Banff. They were recently dinner guests of the Duke of Kent in the cabin which he occupied there for a few days.

There's also quite a Washington colony at Pictou Lodge, in picturesque Nova Scotia. Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, of Crescent Place, and Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis are registered there. Another is Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, who is accompanied by her young son. The Strongs spent the early part of the summer at their home on Gibson Island, where all the family take an active part in sailing.

Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf Walling are among the late-summer vacationists. They are at Sakonet, R. I., with their little son, and will remain over Labor Day. Theodore Dominick, who is architect for the house which the Wallings are building in nearby Virginia, and Mrs. Dominick are visiting friends in Connecticut and won't return until after the holiday.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, who are at Manchester, on the Massachusetts North Shore, will be joined shortly by their daughters, Jane and Mary, and their son, David. The wedding of Miss Jane Acheson to Dudley Brown will take place in Washington September 27 and will draw many prominent Capitalites back to town.

Countess Lasocka, wife of the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy, is expected to remain on the Massachusetts North Shore over the holiday. She is visiting Mrs. Philip Coffin and the latter's sister, Donna Julia Brambilla. Count Lasocki spent several weeks there earlier in the season, but is now back in Washington at his embassy desk. Mme. Ciechanowska, wife of the Polish Ambassador, is also summering on the North Shore.

Wayne Taylors In Nantucket

The Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor are vacationing at picturesque Nantucket Island, the farthest American bit of land in the Atlantic. They are not expected to return to their home here until September 10.

Also at Nantucket are Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, "Aunt Bessie" to the Duchess of Windsor, and Mrs. John Lord O'Brian, wife of the general counsel for OPM. It's probable that Mrs. Merryman will return to Washington to see the duke and duchess when they stop here briefly on their way to the duke's ranch in Canada.

Two members of Capital society who literally never tire of Washington in the summer are Mrs. George T. Pettengill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, and Mrs. Waggaman Pulver. Both intend to remain over Labor Day, and are distinct additions to the waning season. Mrs. Pettengill hopes to be joined soon by her son, Bill, who is recovering at the Naval Hospital in Pensacola from an automobile accident.

Schoenfelds On Honeymoon

Lieut. and Mrs. Douglas Reid Schoenfeld, who were married on Saturday, left immediately afterward for a honeymoon. Their wedding is of much interest to Washington as the bridegroom is the son of the United States Minister to Finland, H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, and Mrs. Schoenfeld. The bride is the former Miss Frances Drisler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Drisler, of Pine Orchard, Me.

Their wedding took place in Pine Orchard Chapel, the Rev. S. Flockhart, of New Haven, Conn., officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk jersey with a long tulle veil held by a cap of heirloom lace and carried white orchids and stephanotis. A sister, Miss Barbara Drisler, was maid of honor, dressed in Florentine rose faille with a matching velvet hat trimmed with brown veiling and carrying a bouquet of mixed flowers.

The other attendants, who were gowned in a paler shade of rose, were the Misses Doris Drisler, another sister of the bride; Marion R. Schoenfeld, sister of Mr. Schoenfeld; Dorothy Bouton and Jane Landon, of Bronxville, N. Y.; Mrs. Douglas Fairchild, of Syosset, Long Island, and Mrs. John Gibson 3d, of Newton Center, Mass. Barbara Perry, of Bronxville, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. Derek R. Schoenfeld was best man for his brother.

The bride, a great-granddaughter of the late Dr. Henry Drisler, of Columbia University, was graduated in 1938 from Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and was introduced to society the same year. Lieut. Schoenfeld prepared at St. Alban's School in Washington and was graduated in 1940 from Princeton University. He is a member of the Quadrangle Club and the Princeton Club of New York.

Van Hornes Announce Birth of a Daughter

Maj. and Mrs. Edwin Van Horne announce the birth of a daughter, their third child, last Friday at the cadet hospital, United States Military Academy, West Point. The child will be named Gretchen.

Mrs. Van Horne is the former Miss Mary Howe, daughter of the late Mr and Mrs. William F. Howe, of New York.

whose husband, Lieut. Strawbridge, has been called to Washington for duty at the Navy. Mrs. Strawbridge, the former Peggy Dorrance, and her husband are occupying the Alex Hagner home on Kalorama Road

Tiedemans To Live in N. J.

The couple were married in the chapel of Mount Vernon Seminary, the Rev. R. E. Fuessle of St. Alban's officiating. A reception followed at the Tiedeman home.

The bride wore a gown of goldenrod taffetta and net. Her pompadour bonnet of wine velvet had a long veil and she carried a bouquet of wine gladioli. Mrs. George H. Winner, of Elmira, N. Y., served as matron of honor. She wore a leaf green taffeta frock with a brown velvet bonnet. Her gladioli bouquet was of bronze color. David V. Tiedeman, of Elsmere, N. Y, served as best man. Ushers were Walter Tiedeman, jr., of Elsmere, N. Y. Dorsey Thomas, jr., of this city, Ray Norton of Smithtown Branch, Long Island and Paul Jaquet, jr., of this city.

Mrs. Thomas received with the young couple at the reception wearing a wine crepe gown and a matching feather hat. Mrs. Tiedeman chose a sapphire blue lace frock. The bride graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary and studied at Corcoran School of Art.

Miss Mary Cotsonis' Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cotsonis, of Washington, announce the engagement of their daugher, Mary Cotsonis, to George Seymore, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Seymore, of Washington and Petersburg, Va. The news was made known at a dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Cotsonis.

The wedding will take place in September.

Harriet L. Bundy Is Betrothed To Gaspard Belin

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hollister Bundy, of Boston, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Harriet Lowell Bundy, to Gaspard d'Andelot Balin, jr., son of Mr. Belin, of Waverly, Pa., and the late Mrs. Belin. Mr. Belin was graduated from Yale University in 1939.

Mr. Bundy, father of the prospective bride, is a Boston lawyer. Several months ago he was named special assistant to the Secretary of State.

Mrs. Cory Heads Conference Group

Mrs. E. N. Cory of College Park, Md., has been named chairman of the committee for the entertainment of women attending the seventh National Shade Tree Conference to be held at the Mayflower Hotel August 26—29. Other members of the committee are: Mrs. A. Robert Thompson, Mrs. Richard P. White, Mrs. George W. Harding and Mrs. G. F. Gravatt.

Tentative plans include a luncheon at the Mayflower, sightseeing trips and visits to Mount Vernon, the National Gallery of Art and the Federal Bureau of Investigation; a picnic outing at Hains Point and a banquet and dance at the Mayflower.

Approximately 100 wives of delegates attending the conference are expected to be present.

Edward Parrys to Give Supper September 5

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Parry have invitations out for a beer supper on Friday evening, September 5, at their home, Cricket Hill, on the Donald Downs property in nearby Virginia.

The guests are asked to come as reproductions of famous paintings, and prizes will be awarded to the most original.

Chichesters On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. William Sydnor Baillio Chichester, jr., who were married on Saturday, will make their home in Aquasco, Md., after a honeymoon in Virginia. The bride, the former Miss Muriel Pollard Bialock, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Bialock, jr., of that place and Mr. Chichester is the son of Mrs. Ruth Robinson Chichester, of Aquasco.

Luscious Berry Desserts Are Now in Season

Expert Gives Recipes For Preparing Pies and Cobblers

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

THE BERRY season which is in full swing now, brings thoughts of many delicious pies and cobblers to mind. And it is very easy for the cook to bring them fragrantly tantalizing to the table.

One way to use blackberries is to roll them into a rich dough, bake the roll to a golden brown and serve with tart lemon sauce. The following recipe for Blackberry Roll is a basic one. But blueberries, dewberries or a combination of berries, may be used in making the dessert.

Blackberry Roll

Wash 1 pint of fresh blackberries and drain well. Sift flour, then measure to 2 cups. Resift with 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Cut ½ cup shortening into the flour mixture. Add about ¾ cup milk and mix quickly but thoroughly. The dough should be soft. Turn onto a floured board. Knead about ½ minute. Roll to ¼ inch thickness. Spread the berries over the dough. Sprinkle lightly with sugar. Roll up like jelly roll, pinching edges firmly in place. Place roll on well greased pan and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, until brown. Serve with lemon sauce. Yield: 8 servings.

Mary Ball Washington created a gingerbread recipe on which a ready-mixed gingerbread product has been founded. If you want a delicious, easy-to-make dessert, this product made into a cobbler and served with blueberries is just the thing for which you are looking. Make some blueberry gingerbread cobblers, then turn upside down for a change. Here are the directions:

Gingerbread Cobbler

Empty the contents of a package of gingerbread mix into a mixing bowl. Measure 1 cup of cold water or milk and pour half of liquid into this mixture. Stir vigorously until free from lumps; stir in remainder of liquid gradually. The batter will be very thin. Grease 8 custard cups and divide 1½ cups blueberries evenly in the cups. Fill cups 2-3 full with the gingerbread mix. Bake in moderate oven for 35 minutes. Serve hot or cold. Turn out the cobblers on serving plate and serve with sweetened whipped cream. Makes 8 servings.

Loss of Weight Lowers Blood Pressure

On Balanced Diet Woman Achieved Needed Reduction

By Ida Jean Kain

TODAY'S story is about a woman from Missouri who lowered her blood pressure 95 points in three months by reducing her weight. If you are "from Missouri" and think it could not be done, just read this letter. It may help you to add years to your life.

"Letters in your column from successful reducers were my mental crutch on which I leaned when my will-power began to sag, so perhaps this letter will give someone else a boost who might be sorely in need of it.

"Three months ago my doctor informed me that I was in grave danger of having a stroke anytime, because my blood pressure was 240 points. Since there was no organic trouble the whole cause was overweight. He warned me that unless I reduced my weight immediately he would not be responsible for the consequences.

"I had saved your articles, diets and exercises since they first appeared in my paper, 'for future use.' I got the mout and knuckled use.' I got them out and knuckled the result that today I weigh 32 pounds less and my blood pressure is down from 240 to 145 points. I have a new chance on life again. Thank you for all you have done. I hope to be able to continue with the diet and exercises until my weight is normal again. I did not start on the exercises until I had my doctor's permission."

Weight Reduction Necessary

That letter should prove a real inspiration. Reduction of the weight is so effective in lowering the blood pressure that it is now given first importance in treatment of cases in which there is obesity. Even a slight weight reduction decreases the pressure. In a medical survey of 1000 cases of overweight, in every case over 20 years of age, the blood pressure was above normal; in every instance weight loss was followed by a lowering of the blood pressure. The drop of pressure was 14 or more points with 10 pounds of weight lost. Twenty-three of the cases treated had blood pressure of over 200, and through a loss of 10 or more pounds an average drop of 43 points was effected.

Excessive Weight Invariably Imposes Strain on Heart

To understand how a single pound lost decreases the strain, each pound of fat requires six-tenths of a mile of blood vessels, and for 15 pounds of excess there are nine extra miles of blood vessels. As fat storages increases beyond normal, new blood vessels are formed to nourish this fatty tissue, which adds to the work of the heart and greatly raises the blood pressure.

Well Balanced Diet

The diet for reducing weight and blood pressure is a well-balanced menu of from 1200 to 1400 calories per day, divided among the protective foods, with liberal quantities of fresh fruits, fruit juices and fresh vegetables and a normal amount of protein in the form of lean meat, milk, cheese and eggs, plus a restricted amount of whole grain bread and butter.

Exercise should not be taken without the doctor's permission, and then the kind in which you bend over to touch fingers to toes and jumping and kicking variety should be avoided. Milder exercises to tone the trunk muscles are more effective.

The 21-day diet will help to reduce weight and blood pressure. Enclose 3-cent stamped, addressed envelope to Ida Jean Kain, in care of the Promotion Department, Room 600, of The Washington Post.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Speaking From Experience as 'Gob' in Last War, Man Joins Us in Recommending Immediate Marriage To Sailor, 21, Who Asked How to Safeguard Love

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with much interest the letter from "H. P. L.," and your reply thereto, published August 15. I wish that I might have had your counsel some 20-odd years ago, when I and my sweetheart were confronting much the same problem as this 21-year-old sailor and his 19-year-old sweetheart, who wonder what course to take during the war-clouded days which lie ahead.

We were attending school together and were sincere, religious youngsters, purely and passionately in love, when the other war broke. I quit school and joined the Navy. So I know something of this boy's present surroundings; and something, too, of his misgivings, his longings, his fierce and relentless struggle to hold to the higher plane of thought and action, in the midst of inducements to the contrary. I think your advice to this young couple—namely, to get married immediately—is exactly right, Miss Haworth.

We decided to be married, but I was denied any leave, and went to France without seeing my sweetheart again, as it was a long overland trip to her home and we were two struggling youngsters, financially on our own. I had only a day's notice before sailing. It was too long years before I saw her again—and then only for three brief days at my parents' home. It was six more months before I was released from the service. And again I made the mistake of postponing marriage.

She had a job. I had none. I saw her for a brief visit and returned to college, telling her that in two more years I would be able to take care of her. But I was asking too much in expecting her to wait so long—a fact which I learned years later, in a letter from her. She was very much hurt that I had twice put off marrying her. I was stunned when the engagement ring came back to me without warning. There was no quarrel. There never has been.

She started going with another boy, and I with other girls. I married a wonderful woman. I never dreamed such courage, such loyalty and unselfishness could be wrapped up in one frail human body. But still there was something missing. Always in my troubled dreams, my sweetheart came back to me. I worked (as they say) as one possessed. Sometimes I went for months without a single day's rest, and stopped at night only when too exhausted to continue.

My wife worried and tried to force her frail body to keep pace with mine, despite my protest. As a result, she has lain for years now a helpless invalid, yet cheerful and happy to be with her husband and family. After eight years of marriage, I decided I could stand it no longer, although I knew I could not ask for a better wife. I went to see the girl. She was kind (a gracious lady); but of course our meeting was short. Then followed a letter, telling me my duty was to stay with my wife and family. There was no censure, no complaint; but a story of eight years of heartache and loneliness was told in that letter.

Two years later she married a man who had been patiently courting her for 10 years. She had told me in the letter she planned to marry him; and that she would then know something of what I had known. Miss Haworth, I have remained physically faithful to a wonderful wife. But I realize that my shortcomings have been a source of boundless grief and suffering to two lovely women and at times I nearly go mad. I curse the day I was born. I drive myself to utter exhaustion and seek relief in tortured sleep, filled with dreams of a girl who said I came back from the Navy changed.

And all of this could have been prevented if I had married her, and we had worked out our problems together. A pal of mine, at school and in the Navy, pursued that course (the course you advise), and today he is a prosperous, proud and happy family man. And I am glad for him and his good wife. The road is not easy. It presents many hardships and disappointments. But two youngsters blessed with love for and faith in each other can make the grade and be happy while doing it.

EX-GOB.

Mother Speaks Frankly On Subject of Passion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is something I have never done before: write to a newspaper column. But your answer of August 21 to "G. M." interests me deeply. She says the nervous excitement attended on seeing her "selectee" beau, about once a month, invariably makes her sick at the stomach; so ill, in fact, that she is almost afraid to leave the house, thus spoiling "the wonderful few hours" they can be together. She wonders if the sickness is caused by "suppressed emotions," and asks if the condition can be corrected.

You tell her the sickness is mentally induced; that it comes of giving those meetings too much of an "imaginative build-up" in advance; and that a revision of her general pattern of thought and behavior is necessary for calming her quivering nerves and queasy stomach. If your answer is intended to discourage the development of an excessive attachment between the young people, it is excellent. Otherwise, I consider it less than strictly honest.

The symptoms described by the young women are familiar to anyone who has ever loved deeply. I have experienced them; and I am neither overly imgainative nor socially unoccupied. I have been married for a number of years, and I still experience those identical sensations after any interval of separation from my husband. And it doesn't have to be as long as a month, either. My husband is a doctor, by the way, and he considers such tension quite normal for persons in love.

So it would seem to me that the girl should be more concerned with preserving that love which is the incitant of her "normal" symptoms, than with worrying about her sometime discomfort—providing, of course, the young man feels as she does! Why be mysteriously evasive with young persons who are coping ingenuously with the passion of love? So often a clean-cut statement of simple truth in such matters would be their greatest protection and consolation. The best of luck to them—and to you.

Do You Talk With Charm?

"WHAT DO the boys see in her?"

Maybe, if you're just seeing there isn't anything special about her. But how about listening to her a while? Those simple but friendly little phrases she knows—perhaps they're why boys seem so happily at ease with her.

When her date arrives she's all smiles: "It seems like ages since I've seen you!" They don't have to grope awkwardly for conversation; she starts him talking with "I must catch up on everything you've been doing lately."

Her turn to chatter? She doesn't fumble, "Oh, er, you know what I mean." She hits the nail on the head with vivid figures of speech: "Happy as a kitten with a bowl of cream . . . heavy as Jim's famous flapjacks."

Now, frankly, couldn't you do the same? Next time you're at a party say to your hostess "Did you arrange those flowers? They're lovely!" She'll see you have an especially nice time.

To that shy boy who asks for a date, answer "I'd adore to" if you want him on your steady list. And don't forget the boss. A pleasant "Certainly, Mr. Jones" will count in your favor when raises come up.

'Blues,' Facing Encirclement By 'Red' Forces, Hope for Rain

By LEON KAY
United Press Staff Writer

With the Third Army in Louisiana, Aug. 24.—Vastly outnumbered defending Blue forces tonight went into position hoping for rain which would impede a double encirclement to be launched by heavily armored Red forces some time after midnight. Heavy clouds held some promise that rain would bog the attackers' tanks.

The high command concentrated attention on the new tank destroyer forces being developed in this second phase of intra-Army maneuvers as part of three such destroyer forces to be organized in the Third Army.

With the tank destroyer units the Blues, numbering some 60,000, and including the motorized, triangular Second Infantry division, will face 130,000 Reds, including the Second Armored Tank Division and cavalry.

Tank Killers Used

The tank destroyer forces were used in the first phase of maneuvers by the Reds. They are highly mobile, flexible groups including anti-tank guns, heavy machine guns, scout cars, air observation, infantry engineers and signal units drawn from the entire Army corps and operate under a single command. They are rushed wherever attack threatens, and carry out Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger's idea of an "offensive defense."

The Reds will attempt to profit by the Blues' initial tactical error of wasting their tanks in reconnaissance and scattered fighting. The Reds expect to concentrate their tank forces for the death blow, using cavalry to feel out the Blues' weakest defense.

Thus the Reds will try to dislodge the enemy by highly developed outflanking maneueverability of their armored striking force. This second phase of the war games is due to demonstrate that without this maneuverability of attackers, the Blues could hold out for some time.

Senate Cafe Scandal Stirs Investigation

Payroll padding, embezzlements and loose handling of money spent under supervision of the U. S. Senate committee on rules between 1935 and early this year will run to $71,304, investigators employed by the presently constituted committee have learned, according to a study made by the Prividence, R. I., Journal.

This was while the committee was headed by former Senator Matthew M. Neely, (Democrat), now Governor of West Virginia.

A Federal employe appointed by Neely as a Senator has told Federal investigators that some of a $7552.06 shortage charged to him was spent last year to get out votes in the Neely cause. This man is W. W. Arbuckle, former manager of the U. S. Senate's three restaurants or luncheonettes, who has been indicted by a Federal grand jury in Washington specifically for embezzlement of $1925. The sum represents money collected from cashiers of Senate restaurants and not deposited in the bank by Arbuckle.

Neely Denies Charges

Gov. Neely has said that Arbuckle did some work during his gubernatorial campaign last year, while restaurant manager for the Senate, but that the money he spent comprised $50 which he (Neely) personally gave him, and $400 raised by solicitation of two West Virginia Democrats, one of them party chairman Hale Watkins. Neely poohpoohed truth of the story Arbuckle has told investigators that part of the money involved in his shortage went for political purposes.

The scandal involving the supervision of the housekeeping funds of the United States Senate has been unearthed through Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, who became chairman of the Senate Rules Committee when Neely quit his seat to entrench himself back home.

Byrd immediately became the spur to reform of the sloppy system whereby Government property assigned Senators was never inventoried, restaurant funds never regularly audited, restaurant employes never regularly examined by health officials, and custodial employes never carefully checked.

Auditor Checked Up

An auditor borrow from the General Accounting office who got lots of help in the form of other auditors, plus Secret Service men and agents of the United States district attorney's office, dug into the situation which existed while Neely was chairman of the committee.

This investigation turned up these things:

In addition to Arbuckle's shortage of $7562, there was a shortage of $21,961 in the accounts of E. Harvey King, assistant manager and auditor under Arbuckle. King was a bonded employe, and while he has been fired, has not been charged with any crime because of the shortage.

The Senate paintshop, under direction of Samuel N. Hedges, a West Virginian, had a padded pay roll which auditors under direction of Special Investigator Edward M. Tyler have determined amounted to the payment of $41,790.65 to 19 strictly mythical persons over a period of years between 1935 and early this year. The fictitious employes were on pay rolls for the Senate paintshop, which during Senate recess hires dozens of extra painters on occasion, and most of the checks drawn to them have been found to have been cashed in the Senate restaurant.

Hedges finally was trapped by handwriting on notes he left to friends, saying he was going to commit suicide. He never attempted suicide, but left the notes after investigators pressed him to produce one of the fictitious employes in the flesh. He was quickly taken into custody when the notes were found, and when experts said Hedge's handwriting was on both the notes and on pay roll checks made out to mythical employes, he was charged with defrauding the Government. A subordinate, Harry Cheek, likewise was charged.

PRESENTATION—Dr. Frederick W. Cropp (left), secretary of the American Bible Society, giving a Bible yesterday for Arlington Cantonment Chapel to Chaplain John B. Duncan, with Chaplain George F. Rixey (center) representing Army Chief of Chaplains William C. Arnold, looking on

The Bible—"sword of the spirit"—is still being unsheathed in the embattled world, Dr. Frederick W. Cropp said yesterday at Arlington Cantonment Chapel, where he formally presented a pulpit Bible on behalf of the American Bible Society. e is one of the society's general secretaries.

"In times of emergency and spiritual darkness," declared Dr. Cropp during Protestant services, "people reach for the weapon which can best drive back oppressive foes and win a certain victory."

He told the assembly of soldiers that it is not enough simply to possess it or say a good word for the Bible. "It must be carried into battle," he said. "You must not leave it rusting away in its scabbard."

The Bible, first to be placed in the 535 Army-built chapels, was formally accepted by Chaplain George F. Rixey, who said it "offers those truths of God upon which the foundation of our democratic way of life stands."

"In this Word, and the truth it teaches" he added, "is to be found the flame by which the fires of freedom, democracy, common understanding and charity, so nearly extinguished in many sections of the world, will be rekindled into a glorious effulgence."

Chaplain Rixey represented Army Chief of Chaplains William S. Arnold. Chaplain Rixey turned the Book over to Chaplain John B. Duncan, of the Arlington Cantonment.

CCC 'Graduate' Wins Seat In Michigan Legislature

Copyright by New York Times

Job prospects for Civilian Conservation Corps graduates have so improved that one of them, 28-year-old John Sabol, has been elected as Representative in the State Legislature from Ironwood, Mich. During the 1941 fiscal yehr 7,582 men left the corps before completion of their terms of enrollment to accept private jobs or join the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, as compared with 45,113 who left for jobs in industry or the armed services the year before.

Of the 77,582 who left during the 1941 fiscal year, 14,921 joined the Army or Navy, while the balance left for private jobs. Of the 77,582, a total of 20,494 left the corps during the final two months of the fiscal year.

The type of private jobs secured varied considerably. For example, among 290 men placed in California, in June, the greatest number, 113, took jobs in trades and factories, 34 having been employed in construction work, 26 in factories, 12 in aircraft plants, 11 in garages, 12 in other types of industrial employment, 36 on farms, 23 in State and Federal Government agencies. Seventeen enlisted in the Army, Navy and National Guard, while six were drafted.

Representative John Sabol first enrolled in the CCC seven years ago and served a year in Michigan and the State of Washington. After leaving the CCC for some time he rejoined in 1936 and was assigned to northern Idaho. He then obtained a position as work superintendent in charge of construction of the mainland base for the Isle Royal Park at Houghton, Mich.

Paul Mather, of Company 249, Red House, N. Y., secured a good secretarial job as a result of study in camp plus a little publicity. Mather, attending Colston University during his leisure time, won a gold scholarship cup at the school. The story was printed in local newspapers and a few weks later Mather received a letter from a firm in Jamestown, N. Y., offering him a secretarial position. The company's president had seen Mather's story in one of the papers.

Another unusual CCC success story is that of Al Woehrle, who developed a newspaper syndicate in New York City which now serves some 70 newspapers. Woehrle arrived in New York after his enrollment period, broke and jobless, and he haunted the New York newspaper offices for a job, without success. Finally a weekly put him to work gathering obituary notices on a space basis.

His fist week's pay was 70 cents, but the work gave him an idea. He began collecting news that others regarded as too insignificant for attention. Gradually, he built up a list of papers that bought news on hometown people living in New York, or news stories which the small papers in New ork suburbs were unable to secure in any other way. At the present time, Woehrle syndicates his material to 70 newspapers, has a radio news service, an office and two employes.

Bert McCloskey was made first aid attendant in Company 1832 in Colorado. He is now in his third year in the medical school of Colorado University. Wally Zick, using a trade he learned in the CCC, is running his own garage.

Adams County, Pa., Reports Its Seventh Paralysis Case

Special Dispatch to The Post

Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—Adams County's seventh case of infantile paralysis has been reported here. The victim is Martha Martin, 12, eldest of seven children of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Martin, Gettysburg, Route 4.

Special police officers were on duty in Gettysburg and other county boroughs this weekend to prevent minors from assembling in stores, soda fountains or theaters in accordance with health regulations invoked a week ago.

7 Die in Bus Crash; D. C. Woman Hurt

By the Associated Press

Waldwick, N. J., Aug. 24.—A 38-passenger Central Greyhound bus plowed into four parked cars on Route 2 tonight and burst into flames, causing the deaths of at least seven persons and injuries to an undetermined number.

A holocaust which followed the crash reduced the bus and one car to warped masses of metal. Six charred bodies, including what appeared to be a mother with an infant clasped to her breast, were taken from the automobile.

The automobiles were stopped at a traffic light when the bus, which was bound from Albany to New York, approached on a downgrade and hit them, Corporal Jacob J. Harris of the Ridgewood State Police said.

Of the dead, only one was immediately identified. Attendants at Hackensack General Hospital said he was Joseph Bason, 38, of 110 Grant Avenue, Jersey City.

Four persons were admitted to Hackensack Hospital, one of them was so severely burned that he was not expected to live, and five others were discharged after treatment for cuts and bruises.

[One of those released after treatment was Mrs. Ethel Katz, 30, Washington, D. C., the United Press reported.]

Former Gardener At Presidential Greenhouses Dies

Funeral services for James A. Watt, 86, gardener at the Presidential greenhouses in the days when they adjoined the White House, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the George W. Wise funeral home. Interment will be at Glenwood Cemetery. Mr. Watt, formerly of 637 Maryland Avenue, died in a hospital here on Friday after an illness of several years.

The son of Scotch immigrant parents, who came directly to Washington from Scotland, Mr. Watt was born in this city and resided here all his life. Working in the greenhouses before Theodore Roosevelt moved them to the Manument grounds, he had many personal reminiscences of United States presidents and their wives. His favorite chief executive was William McKinley.

He was a former grand master of the Friendship Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the oldest living past grand master in the District.

He leaves a sister, Mrs. Helen G. Bache; two nieces, Mrs. Willis Harlan and Mrs. Warren Tolson, and three nephews, Walter B. Simpson, Thomas E. Simpson and Harry Harding, all of Washington.

PREVUE OF BALALAIKA. Standing in a whirl of hustling workmen, blueprints and decorators' drawings, we gained an idea of what the new Balalaika will be like. Artist Brian Brown has planned a knock-your-eye-out interior keynoted with brilliant magenta and turquoise hues. Murals in curlicue gold frames will center panels done in high Slavic color. In two large alcoves there'll be solid black fabric panels with huge flaring-rayed suns with concealed lights behind them. The stage where Balalaika revues will be presented is to be flanked with handsome twisted pillars . . . Exact date hasn't been set yet, but the Balalaika with two bands (including the original one from the "Balalaika" movie) and a colorful revue a la Russe, will open around the middle of September.

Jack Schafer has brought a flock of new and somewhat naughty songs back from New York, will present them at the Casino Royal early next month. An all new revue headed by Ann Grace's Co-Eds opens today at the Casino Royal.

IN THE MAIL. The September issue of Madrillon's Gourmet with leading articles by Host Peter Borras and Character Analyst Andre . . . A letter from Maria Karson who used to be at Mayfair with her Girl Musicales. She's now at the White Sulphur Spring Hotel near Saratoga, sends her "best" to Mayfair's Jimmy Byrd and Manager Peterson . . . A note from Violinist Harold Veo announcing the opening of his new music bureau . . . And Jean Dulaney of the Mayflower writes to tell us that Drummer Buddy Harmon of the Mayflower Lounge orchestra is on a milk diet and says that after an hour of drum pounding he feels like a milk shake!

SHOREHAM TERRACE VIEWS. Vice President Wallace and Banker Robert Fleming were among the many "biggies" spotted on the Shoreham Terrace lately. They both seemed to be enjoying Barnee's rendition of "Lonely," delightful number recently written by Mrs. Myrtle Richardson, of Washington.

TROIKA'S NEW CRYSTAL ROOM. Troika is blossoming out like an orchid in preparation for its September 4 opening. There'll be two bands, one led by Sashu Lukas and a smaller rumba unit to play in the new Crystal Room which takes it name from a pair of magnificent crystal chandeliers said to be as fine as those of the White House, if not as large. The lobby and Gypsy Room are to be completely done over and a squad of experts is freshening the Troika murals.

V stands for Volume as well as Victory judging by the loads of lyrics that have poured into the Neptune Room for tomorrow's "V for Victory Night." Don Baker vows he'll sing 'em all, or else.

AT BURTS TRANS-LUX we saw Richard Frankensteen, nationally known labor man, chatting with Singer Eileen O'Neill, several tables of railroad and aviation execs. Burt's seems to be the after-hours headquarters of officials from transportation offices in the neighborhood.

PILGRIM FATHERS CUT UP. Sketches for the new Plymouth murals show Pilgrim fathers having a time for themselves. They're shown helping pretty girls off boats, receiving an Indian arrow on their south terrace, slipping a scuttle of beer to a miscreant in the stocks, doing a spot of "bundling."

COLLEGE SONG EXPERTS are the Heintze Brothers of Restaurant "823". They know hundreds of college songs, explain explain that they enjoy playing this type of music because it's often based on splendid old melodies. Thus the University of Pennsylvania song is really the Imperial Russian Anthem, the U. of Maryland song is an old German Christmas song, the U. of Virginia song is "Auld Lang Syne" with different words and the U. of Texas song is based on that old hum-dinger, "I've Been Working on the Railroad".

This is your last week to enjoy the Starlight Roof and Dick Wilson's music. The Starlight closes next Saturday evening after one of its most successful seasons. Dancing will be transferred downstairs to Cafe Caprice.

MUSIC YOU'LL LIKE. "Blue Champagne," one of the loviest of songs, becomes even more charmful when played by Ida Clarke in the Lounge Riviera . . . The soprano-ing of Cole Porter's "What Is This Thing Called Love" by Carmela Lazari in the Hi Hat . . . Bill Dunmore's hifalutin' arrangemen of "Once In a While" now being played by Paul Kain's Orchestra at Glen Echo. . .

JEWELRY WITH A JINGLE. Kathleen O'Neill, of Anchor Room's "We Two," loves rather heavy gold jewelry. Some of it jingles when she moves and Partner Clyde Kissinger says, "If you hear any strange chime effects in the next number, it'll just be Kathleen's necklace."

THE READER VORACIOUS is Jack Norman of the Lotus Continental Trio. But he makes no claims to being literary. "I'm what you'd call a magazine worm," he says. "I read all of them,—the Readers' Digest, the pulps the detective stories. Once some one even caught me with a copy of the Woman's Home Companion."

MAYFAIR TRAVELER. Trying hard to keep his feet on the ground is Maestro Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room. Saxist Ray Richardson has been doing his best to take Milton for a ride in the plane he keeps out at Queen's Chapel Airport. But Milton persists in clinging to the ground.

Talking to Bob Roberts, singing guitarist of Mairfair's Senators, is something like reading the National Geographic. He's been around the world twice, once with a company making movie travelogues. In a brief half hour he enlightened us concerning various little known peoples of the Orient, the technic of Chinese music, what happens on the Bund in Shanghai in the early hours of the morning, the beverage regulations in Havana and the fishing off Jupiter Light.

OPM Might Absorb Civil Service—In War

It isn't out of the realm of possibility and it certainly would be probable, if the United States went into a shooting war, that the Civil Service Commission would be absorbed for the duration by OPM's Labor Supply Division. Such a merger has been proposed in part by officials in Sidney Hillman's labor division, mainly by a single campaign to recruit skilled laborers for both private defense industries and the Government. Furthermore, certain commission officials are fearful the commission may be absorbed, displaced, or junked by the Labor Supply Division.

The officials don't have to look very far or very long to see what's happened in other countries. In Britain the Minister of Labor, similar to Hillman's labor division here, has taken over the British Civil Service System for the duration. In Canada a similar transformation has taken place, although the commission retains its identity. In both England and Canada the Civil Service Commissions were displaced by a single labor supply division, on the theory that it was impossible to distinguish between the labor needs of Government and industry.

In light of the experience of England and Canada, it's highly significant that Hillman chose Arthur S. Flemming, the hard-hitting member of the Civil Service Commission, to be director of his Labor Supply Division. Flemming is young, ambitious and dynamic. He has foresight and he can see what's ahead. He is the spark that has made the commission tick in doing a much better job than most people expected in recruiting hundreds of thousands of people for the defense program.

Hillman has said that he picked Flemming for the job because Flemming has successfully directed the greatest mass recruiting job in history. And Hillman believes that if Flemming can do the job for the Government, he also could do it for industry. The record shows that Flemming has had personal charge of a program that has placed nearly 600,000 persons in Army and Navy jobs since the emergency. It's a safe bet that so long as Flemming is director of the labor division the commission will be protected, but a close working arrangement between the commission and the Labor Supply Division will be instituted. Moreover, Federal Security's Employment Service also will be brought much closer into the general labor picture and be placed under Flemming's wing.

"Knudsenisms"

Some of the best "cracks" of the emergency are attributed to serious-minded William Knudsen, director general of OPM. To OPM'ers, these are referred to as "Knudsenisms." Some time ago, a story goes, Knudsen was shown a Navy request for priority to build a large number of straight-back aluminum chairs and the same number of aluminum chairs with a sort of adjustable back. A bit puzzled, Knudsen picked up a phone and called a Navy brass hat. "I know you're going to use the easy chairs to sit in," Knudsen said, "but what are you going to do with the straight-back chairs—put your feet in them?"

The report continues to pop up that Paul McNutt will be made Attorney General. Bar associations the country over are urging his appointment. Supporters of Solicitor General Biddle predict his nomination will be sent to the Senate this week . . . The term of NLRB Member Edwin Smith has expired and it's a cinch that he won't be reappointed, despite strong C. I. O. and left-wing support. Gerald Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, and Walter Morse, dean of the University of Oregon Law School, have been mentioned as possible successors.

Agricultural Adjustment Administration is trying to get its employes to read memos by attaching a green tag which reads in 40-point, boldface type: "Unusually Important Information" . . . U. F. W. A. members are holding something akin to a sitdown in the office of Labor Secretary Perkins in an attempt to get Helen Miller, who was fired on charges of Communistic activity, reinstated and a hearing.

He Didn't Fear a Gun

Monticello, N. Y., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Two men threatened Station Operator Isadore Greenwald with a rifle when he refused to sell them gas. Undaunted, Greenwald seized the gun. Examination proved it unloaded.

"You shouldn't do things like that," warned Greenwald, "Here, take your gun and go."

Just Hunting Job for Wife

A man shuffled over to the Information Booth at Post Square yesterday, and asked if they had any information about jobs. "What kind of work do you do?" inquired the attendant. "Oh, it's not for me," he replied hastily, "it's for my wife. Shes' a laundry worker."

Traffic Hurts 17, Nine in Headon Crash

Driver in Maryland Collision Hunted For Fleeing Scene; D. C. Cyclist Injured

Seventeen persons were injured in traffic accidents yesterday in the metropolitan area.

A head-on collision on the Marlboro Pike near Forestville, Md., early yesterday morning accounted for nine of the persons injured. All were treated at Casualty Hospital, where they were brought by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad.

The driver of the station wagon which figured in this accident is being sought by Prince Georges County police for leaving the scene of the accident. According to police, George Smith, 24, Negro, driver of the station wagon, skipped the scene after the collision. He was bringing six men to the city from a Maryland roadhouse, where they are all employed as waiters. The driver, it was stated, resides at the roadhouse.

Negroes Injured

Injured were Henry Anderson, Negro, 40, of 1805 Ninth Street Northwest; Robert Fitzhugh, 56, Negro, 2426 Shannon Place Southeast; William Powell, 55, 1453 Q Street Northwest; Benjamin Taylor, 43, Negro, of 5220 Blaine Street Northeast; Charles Thomas, 48, Negro, 1436 W Street Northwest; William Thomas, 54, Negro, 1436 W Street Northwest.

Parties in the second car, all on their way to a fishing party along the Maryland shore, who were treated at the hospital were Harold M. Dyer, 27, of Green Castle, Pa.; John Burkett, 32, of Hagerstown, Md. and Allen Burkett, jr., 27, of Mason and Dixon Pa., driver of the car.

Occupant of an auto which swerved to avoid another and overturned near Indianhead, Md., Margaret E. Kirkland, 59, of 3607 Thirty-fifth Place Northwest, suffered serious injuries to the spine and was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Albert H. Good, 49, of 1736 K Street Northwest, was felled by a Capital Transit streetcar in the 2000 block Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, and was taken to Emergency Hospital in serious condition, suffering from skull injuries. The car operator, according to police, was Charles Hawery, 24, of Fairfax, Va.

Woman Hit by Car

An auto struck Margaret Duffy, 42, of 1352 Brentwood Road Northeast, as she was crossing at Fifteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Taken to Sibley Hospital with a fractured skull and left leg, her condition was said to be serious.

Also serious were the injuries to Robert Stultz, 27, of 641 E Street Southeast, in an accident in nearby Maryland while riding his motorcycle. He was brought to Providence Hospital with head and internal injuries.

George Wallace, 38, of 807 Mount Vernon Place Northwest, was victim of a freak accident. As he started to cross K Street Northwest near Eighth, and stepped between two parked autos, a third vehicle ran into one of the parked cars, trapping Wallace between the two. He suffered a broken right leg. Driver of the moving auto, police said, was Stanley Hawkins, 24, Negro, of 422 Sixtieth Street Northeast.

Bicyclist Hit

Alexander Reese, 14, of 660 G Street Northeast, received slight injuries when his bicycle was struck by a taxicab at New Jersey Avenue and G Street Northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for injuries to his shoulder and hip.

Harold Mason, 24, Negro, of 336 Oakdale Place Northwest, collided with an automobile while driving his motorcycle at New York and Florida Avenues Northeast. He was treated for a compound fracture of the left leg. Frederick L. Degges, 70, 107 Thirty-sixth Street Northeast was cut and bruised in a collision in the 800 block of Seventh Street Northeast.

Edward S. Morgan, 52, and his wife, Inez, 50, of 3608 Terrett Avenue, Alexandria, Va., were injured seriously yesterday in the collision of their auto and an ice truck in fog near Oxford, Pa., the Associated Press reported. Mrs. Morgan received critical head injuries.

Firehose Serves as Baptismal Font for 100 Converts

With all the deep emotionalism of their race, 100 Negroes joined yesterday in baptismal ceremonies under a 50-foot stream of water from a fire hose that drenched them and hundreds of some 3000 spectators.

In a roped-off area on M Street between Sixth and Seventh Streets Northwest, in front of the United House of Prayer, black-capped Bishop Charles M. Grace conducted the ceremonies from a truck filled with elders.

"The city Fire Department is helping you get saved," yelled the bishop through a "mike" to the white-robed candidates massed in the street below. "Clap your hands for the city!"

"Yeah, man!" the crowd chorused, then clapped as the bishop went on to say that "God is judging Washington this afternoon."

A Trial for Fireman

"Can you separate God and 'Daddy' Grace," he cried.

"No!" came back the crowd, while the bishop assured it that "the angels in Heaven are taking down this event in shorthand."

"And they're taking shorthand pretty," he smilingly added.

About 20 feet away, Driver J. M. Carter was having trouble keeping the crowd from using the fire engine as a grandstand.

Elders and blue-uniformed attendants of the United House of Prayer were having their troubles, as they tried to get the converts into a circle in the middle of the street while the crowd pressed in from the sidewalks. The fire-engine driver turned on the hose, and the spray persuaded the good-natured crowd to move toward the curb.

Two Bands Play from Trucks

Near the official truck, a policeman whispered something into the bishop's ear. The bishop went to the "mike."

"The police want all the people who are on the roofs of the buildings to come down off the roofs of the buildings," he cried. The spectators began moving back from the roof ledges. Many of the crowd peered from fire-escapes and windows.

As Driver Carter turned on the hose for the baptisms, cornets and horns blared from two bands on trucks.

"I baptize you in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost," said Bishop Grace from his stand.

Almost at the point of physical exhaustion many of the crowd hurried for seats on steps to watch a "peace parade" get under way. The ceremonies were held in connection with the thirteenth annual convocation of the United House of Prayer, of which Bishop Grace is leader and founder. He was born in Portugal.

Thug Flees Office With $576 in Loot

Dentist Surprises Armed Intruder; Refrigerator Truck Robbed of Foodstuffs

An armed and cool-headed thug, surprised in the act of looting a dentist's office at 1726 I Street Northwest yesterday, escaped with cash and articles valued at $576 before the doctor could return with police.

Dr. Karl H. Wood told police that he entered his office about 2:30 p. m. yesterday, after being called downtown to perform a jaw operation. Upon turning on the lights, he said, he discovered a stockily built, man armed with a blackjack, flattened against the wall.

"What are you doing here?" Dr. Wood demanded.

"What are you doing here?" the intruder countered.

When the dentist told him that the office was his, the thug told him to "come on in, I want to see you." Instead Dr. Wood backed out the door, and was cautioned not to run or he would be struck. He backed down the corridor, took the elevator downstairs, and went for the police. When he returned, the man had escaped and $306 in cash, $250 in scrap gold, a check for $27.50 payable to Dr. Wood, and injection needles valued at $20 were discovered missing.

Lookout Broadcast

Police immediately broadcast a lookout for a 35-year-old white man, about 150 pounds, blond coarse hair, bareheaded, wearing a blue sport shirt, elbow length sleeves, no tie, kahki trousers and brown leather gloves.

Up to the time of this robbery, police recorded only petty snatchings ranging anywhere from a parked refrigerator truck to chewing gum and eggs.

H. M. Greenspun, of 207 New York Avenue reported his truck, parked at a service station near his home, was entered by breaking the handle of the side door. Missing were 12 canned hams, 3 bundles of cheese, 6 cans of spiced ham, 8 German salami, 11 sharp cheeses, 2 long ham cheese, 4 balonies and 6 Jewish salami, total value, $166.90.

Boxcar Looted of Eggs

Elsewhere in the city, looters are in possession of five crates of eggs. Sergt. Charles C. Stallwitz, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Police reported a box car in the Jersey Avenue Yards entered and the eggs, valued at $37.50, taken away.

William T. Smith, reported his restaurant at 1132 Fourth Street, Southeast, entered by cutting screen and breaking chain on the frame of a rear window. Stolen was $80 in cash and an unknown quantity of whiskey, cigarettes and chewing gum.

Lieut. Charles G. White, of the United State Army Air Corps, at the Adjutant Generals School, reported stolen from his apartment at 225 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, a leather bag containing $12 worth of men's toilet articles.

Dr. Foelsch Assails Today's Pharisees

"Modern Pharisaism" was criticized by Dr. Charles B. Foelsch in his sermon yesterday morning at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle.

If a man would be truly Christian, he told a large congregation, "his inner thoughts and motives, as well as his outside deeds, must be clean, pure and above reproach."

The love of God is "infinitely more potent" than temporary manifestations of evil men's power, Edward H. DeGroot, jr., said at Wisconsin Avenue Baptist Church, 4226 Fessenden Street Northwest, where he was guest speaker.

"The object of his love is the world," said DeGroot, "a world in rebellion, but capable of reconciliation and transformation." DeGroot is Central Union Mission board chairman and chairman of the National Baptist Memorial Church's board of deacons.

The scope of prayer is as broad as human need, the Rev. Aaron B. Kelley said at Potomac Heights Community Church, 5200 Cathedral Avenue Northwest.

Mr. Kelley was elected pastor last Tuesday. He was formerly associate pastor of Clarendon (Va.), First Baptist Church, and will assume his new duties officially on September 1.

Duke Alumni to Honor University President

Plans for a banquet honoring Dr. Robert Lee Flowers, newly elected president of Duke University, to be held in November, were discussed by members of the Duke University Alumni Association of Washington at a breakfast yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel.

More than 40 persons attended the breakfast which was presided over by Charles S. Rhyne, president of the association. He announced that previous plans for a reception to be given the Duke football team when it arrives here October 12 to play the University of Maryland team had been called off. The Duke coach, Wallace Wade, had vetoed the idea, Rhyne said, because he thought it would interfere with the training of the team.

Tree Parley Opens Here Tomorrow

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, will open the seventeenth National Shade Tree Conference tomorrow with an address of welcome at the Mayflower Hotel at 1:30 p. m. before an expected 400 arborists from all over the Nation.

The conference program, which will continue through Friday, will be devoted to discussions of technical and lay aspects of tree preservation and related subjects. It includes a paper on camouflage technique by Maj. R. P. Breckenridge, of the United States Engineer Corps, and a discussion of "Trees and Defense," led by Vance I. Shield, St. Louis, Mo., head of the National Arborists Association.

The conference is scheduled to make a trip to Mount Vernon on Thursday, where the delegates will plant a tree, in honor of George Washington and hear an address on "Trees of Mount Vernon" by Charles C. Wall, superintendent of the estate.

Richard P. White and A. Robert Thompson, of Washington, are co-chairmen of the convention, along with H. M. Van Wormer, of Richmond, Va.

Cub Reporter Gets an Eyeful At Ballet and Learns a Trifle

Because he had never seen a ballet performance, and desired to go, Earl Wilson, Post cub reporter, was sent to the Watergate last night. His impressions follow:

My ballet's for the ballet. It was wonderful!

Nearly 4000 enthusiasts, including me, showed up at the Watergate to watch the Ballet Russe perform.

Three numbers were presented. First was "The Swan Lake," featuring Nana Gollner as the Queen of the Swans, and Paul Petroff as the Prince.

The aqua marine curtain rose and a group of lovely young things—the program described them as "swans"—came tiptoeing from the wings and began doing what looked to me like a combination of "posing" and the "boomps-daisey." But it was swell.

Scherherazade, the next number on the program, was a colorful fantasy employing large groups of performers in gaudy costumes. The scene was in the court of the Sultan Schariar.

It was all very complicated. But the dancers cut loose. Generous mixtures of the "turkey trot," the "Lindy hop," the Virginia reel" and the highland fling" could easily be discerned by my untutored eye as the dancers cavorted about the stage.

Last on the program was "Graduation Ball," a clever bit about a girl's school. Here again they cut a rug, got in the groove and really sent themselves.

Excursion Boat Docks 2 Hours Late

Seven hundred passengers aboard the S. S. Potomac got two extra hours on the river last night when wheel trouble forced the excursion boat to anchor aff Fort Washington until the mechanism could be repaired.

Among those aboard the vessel, which docked at 2 a. m., were members of the Local Painters Union No. 368, which was running the cruise for the USO fund, 50 servicemen from Arlington Cantonment and Fort Belvoir, and 50 Defense Council hostesses, guests of the Union.

Board Ratifies Acts of Postal Convention

Action of the convention of the National Alliance of Postal Employes in Baltimore last week was ratified yesterday by the executive committee, composed of national officers and district presidents. Lafayette F. Ford, of St. Louis, was named president for a third term.

Mailed ballots showed a unanimous choice of Thomas P. Bomar, of Washington, to succeed himself as national secretary, and for R. L. Hutton, to succeed himself as national treasurer. Leon Chapital, of New Orleans, was elected by convention ballot as vice president, succeeding A. W. Bryan, of Albany, Ga. Snow Grigsby, of Texas, was chosen editor of the official organ, over Joseph B. Brown, of St. Louis, on the fifth ballot.

The convention directed its executive committee to purchase a suitable home as national headquarters here. The choice of welfare director, a position now held by G. N. T. Gray, of Indianapolis, was left to the executive committee.

The convention pledged its organization to cooperate in membership drives with various civic, fraternal and defense organizations, to assist in a program for equalization of salaries of colored and white teachers in Southern and border States, to fight the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting, to work to establish longevity pay in the Postal Service and to establish a Civil Service court of appeals.

Sessions of the convention were addressed by First Assistant Postmaster General Ambrose O'Connell, Civil Service Commissioner Mitchell, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin of the Civil Service Commission, Neal A. Sibley, Postmaster of Baltimore; Ralph Mizelle, H. L. Mims, and others interested in problems involved in selection of the first eligible for appointment from Civil Service lists, regardless of race, color or national origin.

Adams Jail Planned

Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 24.—The August grand jury in Adams County yesterday approved plans for a new Adams County jail to cost an estimated $45,000.

Baltimore Road Traffic Heavy Despite Gas Curb

Traffic on the Baltimore Boulevard yesterday was the "heaviest in recent months" despite the fact that approximately one-third of the filling stations on the boulevard were closed, according to an unofficial survey made by Prince Georges County police patrols.

Normally filling stations on the boulevard remain open on Sunday.

Police said a 4-mile line of cars was snarled during the early afternoon at Laurel, Md., where a narrowed roadway and several stop lights form a "traffic bottleneck." Estimates on the amount of out-of-State traffic using the boulevard were placed as high as one-half.

Meanwhile, station operators in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties continued reduced gas sales of from three to five gallons to each customer. Of ten gasoline stations contacted by a Post reporter along a 6-mile section of the Baltimore Boulevard only one station was found where unlimited sales were permitted.

$20,000 Blaze At Ebbett's Grill

A two-alarm fire that swept through the three-story Old Ebbett's Grill building, 1427 F street northwest, early this morning caused an estimated damage of more than $20,000.

D. C. Boy, 14, Flies First Glider Built By Air Scouts

A glider, recently built in the District Air Scouts' shop, made its first flight at Seminary Airport yesterday morning, with a 14-year-old Washington boy as the initial pilot.

The glider was built by Instructor Harry J. Blutstein, with the help of the local boys and girls who are enrolled in the Scouts' air-training program, which is being offered with the cooperation of District schools.

Richard Wingard, 14, of 1356 D Street Northeast, was one of the six students who took the ship up after the instructor had made a test flight.

'Bookmobiles' To Serve Troops

Two "bookmobiles," to carry reading material into the field for the use of soldiers on maneuvers, will be put into service soon by the National Catholic Community Service, it was announced yesterday.

The mobile libraries are 26 feet long and are equipped with magazines, best-selling novels and religious articles, as well as a portable Mass kit and Stations of the Cross for the use of Catholic chaplains. One of the units will leave New York today for the South, and the other for the West early in September.

Opponents of Daylight Time Here Lead Post Poll, 309-243

Are you in favor of daylight saving time for the District?

"Yes." And how!" wrote one person on his ballot. Others were not so enthusiastic.

Yesterday The Post received 61

> YES [ ]
> NO [ ]
> Comment .....

votes marked "yes" and 34 votes marked "no". This brings the total to date to 309 against and 243 for fast time for the Nation's Capital.

Typical comments for the proposed plan were: "Best thing for the housewife." And, "I prefer daylight saving because it gives me more time for being outdoors and all people who enjoy outdoor sports prefer daylight saving." Another says, "I've enjoyed it before and can think of no reasons against it. I think all should be on the same time whatever it is."

As a rule, those opposing daylight time were more vigorous in their comments. One card, signed A. L. T., said: "To change from present schedules would greatly interfere with well established households and with the public generally. So my vote is no—no—no!"

Edith Hranac, of 1728 Lamont Street Northwest, commented: "To get up earlier one should go to bed earlier, but just try to get much sleep in congested rooming houses before 11 p. m." Then in a lighter vein she continued: "Alarm clocks will be colder at an earlier hour in the morning and will wear out sooner, using up strategic material."

Mrs. Maud C. Degges, of 5200 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, wrote: "No, because of the hardship it will work on many classes of people. Only flappers, interested in an extra hour to doll up for a gay evening, would care for daylight saving. I can remember the sigh of relief everyone gave at the end of daylight saving during the first World War, but to start it in winter time is absurd."

HERTZ LEAVES LEAGUE

St. Louis, Aug. 24.—Douglas Hertz, the New Yorker with grandiose ideas about starting another big league of pro football teams, has pulled out of the venture, he says. He isn't satisfied that other clubs in the proposed American League, have the financial backing to guarantee a full league schedule. He doesn't want his New York Yankees to be operating in a ghost league after a few games.

POVICH

Hertz tipped off his sincerity about putting a strong New York team in the league when he outbid the National League for the contract of John Kimbrough, the Texas A. and M. star who last season was rated at least as good a football player as Tommy Harmon. Kimbrough's contract cost him sums variously reported at $20,000 and $30,000, but those figures didn't deter Hertz. He visualized an American League team in New York, with Kimbrough as the nucleus, that would give the National League a battle for the city's football patronage.

But all of a sudden, Hertz has been panicked, and logically enough, by the thought that his good football team wouldn't have any substantial league to play in. Promoters in Boston, Buffalo and other cities which applied for franchises, were not showing Hertz's alacrity in laying money on the line for outstanding football players. How long they would be able to support teams, particularly losing teams, Hertz did not know. It is something that he should have thought about before, no doubt. He is getting out before he gets in up to his neck.

"Fighting Fund" Is Needed

This hasn't been the first year that various football promoters have tried to buck the National Football League with attempts to put another big league in the field. Almost every season during the last ten has produced some such sort of an effort and they have all been hollow flops. At the first sign of losing money, franchise holders have folded up and left successful teams in the league with nobody to play against. Fly-by-night promoters have been botching the idea for years.

We don't mean to sermonize, but there's only one road to success for folks who want to put another major football league in the field. The dough must be there at the start. Chances can't be taken with faint-hearted club owners who are panicked at the first sign of losing money. No league is stronger, financially, than its weakest franchise, the forfeiture of which would upset a schedule, ruin the league's prestige and cost the league public confidence. There must be guarantees that there will be a league.

Some day smart promoters will pool their money to guarantee that each club will have operating expenses as befits a big league club. There's money in professional football, and we don't mean the money that hare-brained promoters have sunk in fly-by-night leagues. There is dough to be made in the game by another big league. The men willing to underwrite the expenses of an eight or ten club league could give the National League a battle of it, and with the same success that the American League of baseball won its fight for recognition as a second big league after years of haughty scorn by the National.

One of the reasons for the success of the American Baseball League was its "fighting fund." In the early days of the league in the years after the turn of the century, such men as the late Ban Johnson, Charles Comiskey and Clark Griffith were shrewd enough to visualize the struggles the league would have against the National League. From the gate receipts they set aside a fighting fund that would enable them to bolster weak clubs that were threatened with financial losses. Above all, they wanted to keep the league intact. Back in 1915 when Walter Johnson threatened to jump to the Federal League and leave the Washington club high and dry, the league had as much as $450,000 in its fighting fund and was able to meet the challenge of rich Federal league operators who were bidding for their stars.

Talent Is No Great Problem

Even in this day of high football finance, the National League's position as the lone major league of football does not seem to be impregnable. The acquisition of outstanding players by a new league is not a great problem. The colleges each year graduate a new crop of headliners, not all of whom can be signed by the National League. The right kind of money would fetch them into a new league, and not too much of it is required what with the average football rookie getting less than $2,000 a year salary.

A new league would not have to invade National League territory, necessarily. There are other population centers which would support big league football, if there were guarantees that the football would be big league. New York is open to another big league team and Boston, despite its experience with the Redskins, is ready to welcome back a big league club. Baltimore, Buffalo, Cincinnati and Milwaukee are ripe for big league football. There could be another big league if the right people were willing to deposit the right kind of money to finance it, with prospects being that they'd get back their dough, and much more.

. . . And the Filet Is Rejected

San Diego, Calif.

Dear Boss: Sometimes I believe my appetite has a press agent. For instance, this morning the waitress in the hotel coffee shop walked up to my table and asked, "Do you want the breakfast menu, the lunch menu or both." Which reminds me of a conversation I had the other night with a waiter. A woman sitting near me sent back an order of French fried potatoes, claiming that they were cut too small.

I asked the waiter if he had much trouble with finnicky appetites. He told me of an experience which takes the cake for technicalities. He said that on the menu one night was an item, "Filet of Wall-eyed Pike." A man ordered some. The waiter brought him the order and the man looked at it and said, "Take it back. I don't want it."

The waiter returned the filet to the kitchen and told the chef it had been rejected. The chef wanted some constructive criticism and asked the waiter to determine from the man the cause.

The man wrote a note to the chef on the back of a card, something like this: "The filet was pike, it is true, but not wall-eyed pike."

And while on the subject of fish, I'd like to tell a fish story. I heard this yarn spun by Jay Eyster a month ago at Shepherdstown, W. Va., and I heard it again today at Pacific Beach, Calif., with a city official doing the pitching. It might have come West in the gold rush days, but anyway, Boss, it's a Lulu.

Two men were going fishing. They arrived on the river bank and discovered they had forgotten the bait. They were pondering the situation when one of them saw a snake swallowing a big frog. "There's our bait!" he yelled gleefully. He took the butt of his fishing rod and pinned down the snake just behind the mouth. The other fellow reached down, caught the frog by the legs and pulled him out.

His friend said, "That's a dirty trick, taking that snake's dinner away from him. Can't we do something for him?" His partner replied, "O. K., then let's give him a drink." So they poured a big shot into the snake's mouth and released him.

About an hour later, the two men were out in the middle of the river, using the frog legs for bait, when they heard a "tap tap" at the side of the boat. They looked over the side to determine the cause of the strange noise.

And there was that same snake with another frog in his mouth!

Schroeder, Kramer Retain Doubles Title

By International News Service

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 24—Playing steady tennis, Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder this afternoon successfully defended their national doubles championship by defeating fourth seeded Gardnar Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., and Wayne Sabin, Portland, Ore., 9—7, 6—4, 6—2.

In defending the title they won last year on these same courts, the 20-year-old Californians were in trouble only in the first set. They finally broke through Mulloy's service, however, and took command easily in the remaining sets.

Tournament favorites also won in the woman's division when top-seeded Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, New York, and Miss Margaret Osborne, San Francisco, rallied to beat second seeded Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, and Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monica, Calif., 3—6, 6—1, 6—4.

The Cooke-Osborne tandem suffered a relapse in the first set when, after winning the first three games, Mrs. Cooke suddenly lost control of her play around the net and Bundy and Betz ripped through six straight games. Mrs. Cooke steadied in the second set and the new champions had little worry for the remainder of the match.

Jones Stars As Ryder Cuppers Bow

Challengers Score, 8½ to 6½; Wood, Hogan, Demaret, Heafner, Shute Win

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 24.—Bobby Jones overcame a four-hole deficit today to lead his challenge team to a stirring 8½ to 6½ victory over the American Ryder Cup team in their charity series before swarming galleries at the Detroit Golf Club. It was the first Ryder Cup setback on home soil.

Roaring back spectacularly against Henry Picard, who had opened with a pair of birdies and had taken a 4 up lead at the turn, Jones pulled even at the 18-hole mark and won, 2 and 1, on the thirty-fifth hole. Jones gathered three birdies and was two over par for the distance.

Jones got adequate assistance from Craig Wood, Ben Hogan, Jimmy Demaret, Clayton Heafner and Denny Shute who won in today's singles competition, while Lawson Little squared his match with Sammy Snead of the cup squad and earned half a point. The cuppers took a 3 to 2 lead yesterday in two-ball foursomes.

Where's the Cup

In the clubhouse after the match, Bobby beamed his approval of the triumph and said:

"I want to congratulate all my players. By the way, where is the Ryder Cup?"

He was told the cup would be passed around among the winning players in the next year as a symbol of triumph in the competition, which officials said would raise $25,000 for the United Service Organizations. Today's gallery was estimated by P. G. A. officials at 12,000.

Capt. Walter Hagen's cup squad stayed grimly in tne contention until the last match was completed, but when Denny Shute came in with a 4 and 3 triumph over Harold (Jug) McSpaden, the last desperate chance was gone. Ralph Guldahl, Dick Metz and Jimmy Hines were cup squad victors.

Snead was hottest of the day's competitors, finishing seven under par in his match with Little. Heafner, the North Carolina swinger, was right close behind at six under par while defeating Horton Smith, 7 and 6.

Hogan, Nelson Star

But the battle of those two torrid Texans, Hogan and Byron Nelson, drew top gallery attention before Hogan won, two up. Hogan was five under par, two shots better than Nelson and fired the day's only eagle when he holed an explosion shot from a trap on No. 10. Hogan had six and Nelson ten of the day's accumulation of birdies.

Like his captain, Wood also came from behind to defeat Victor Ghezzi, 3 and 2, in a repeat matching of the two current national champions. Wood, Open titleholder, was two down at noon but went ahead on No. 23. Ghezzi, P. G. A. champion, finally tied it up again on No. 29, but Wood won the last three holes with two birdies and a par. Wood was three under par.

Another Texan, Demaret, boosted the challenger's chances by defeating Paul Runyan, 5 and 4. Guldahl, two-time open champion, was three under par while downing Gene Sarazen, 4 and 2; Metz triumphed over bid Ed Dudley, 5 and 4 and Hines surprisingly trounced Johnny Bulla, 6 and 5.

But the day's top surprise was the manner in which Jones won. Defeated yesterday in two-ball play and starting poorly this morning, Jones suddenly regained his timing on the tee and his touch on the greens. After the ninth hole he played par golf, getting two birdies, 20 pars and two bogies while closing out the match.

York, Left Wrist Broken 2 Weeks, Continues to Play

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 24.—Rudy York, Detroit first baseman, has been playing for two weeks with a broken wrist, it became known today.

Troubled with a pain in his left wrist, York had it X-rayed today and the examining physician said it was broken. York, unbelieving at first, said it must have happened two weeks ago when he tagged George Case in Washington.

Despite the injury, York played today against the Philadelphia Athletics and said he believed he would be able to finish the season.

Yank Homers Aid in Sweep Of Double Bill

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 24.—With Charley Keller sounding off for two homers and Tommy Henrich for one in the nightcap, the New York Yankees' power exploded in the late innings at both games today to sweep a doubleheader from the second place Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1 and 8 to 5.

The New Yorkers contented themselves with a quartet of singles for four ninth-inning runs that decided a one-all tie between two pitching patriarchs, Charley Ruffing and Ted Lyons, in the opener. They reverted to extra base technique in wholesale fashion, however, as they erased a 4-to-2 seven-inning Chicago lead in the afterpiece.

Henrich tied the score off Lefty Thornton Lee with his twenty-fourth homer after Phil Rizzuto walked with one away in the eighth inning of the second game. Keller followed with his thirty-second circuit blow, which, like his thirty-first with none on in his previous time at bat in the sixth inning, sailed into the upper right-field pavilion.

Joe Gordon then doubled, stole third and scored on Frenchy Bordagaray's squeeze bunt, with singles by Catcher Ken Silvestri and Pitcher Spud Chandler nudging across a fifth run.

Appling Singles

A budding Chicago counter-rally started in the home half when Luke Appling singled and scored on Julius Solters' double. Johnny Murphy was rushed to Chandler's assistance. Then outfielder Julius (Moose) Solters threw a monkey wrench in Sox hopes when for the second time in the game his base-running set up a double play.

Evidently expecting Bordagary's throw on Tom Turner's line drive to go through Shortstop Rizzuto, Solters idled a few feet off second, only to be doubled when Rizzuto

Nats Bow To Browns In 10th, Sink Lower

Auker Wins 4-3 Game on Six-Hit Pitching; Sundra Gets No Assistance

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, Aug. 24.—The Nats landed deeper in the cellar this afternoon as they were held to six blows by Elden Auker and surrendered a 4-3 ball game to the Browns. The end came in the tenth inning.

It came when Catcher Bob Swift dumped a squeeze play bunt in front of the plate with one out and the bases filled to fetch the winning run home.

The Nats lost only one ball game today, however, perhaps because only one ball game was played. The second part of the doubleheader was rained out, but at the rate the Nats were hitting the ball today, that was probably a blessing.

For Steve Sundra it was a tough sort of defeat. He held the Browns to eight hits and pitched himself a clever sort of ball game, but the Nats were of little help to him.

Bloodworth Homers

The under-handed Auker was the boss of the ball game after the second inning when the Nats took a brief three-run lead on Jimmy Bloodworth's home run. In the last eight innings of the contest, however, the Nats made exactly two hits and no runs whatsoever. Among those who went hitless was Cecil Travis, who knocked only one pitch out of the infield.

Sundra lost a 3-2 lead in the sixth inning when Chet Laabs belted his first pitch into the left-field bleachers for a home run but he held the Browns scoreless thereafter until the tenth, despite two errors by Travis on ground balls.

In the tenth, Sundra was knee-deep in trouble right away. Walter Judnich slammed a two-bagger to deep right with none out, and Culenbine was purposely passed. Grace sacrificed the runners to third and second, and in this crisis Berardino was walked to fill the bases and bring Swift to bat.

Hit First One

It didn't take Swift long. He bunted the first pitch between Sundra and Archie, and Judnich who was speeding home from third with Sundra's windup, scored without drawing a play. Sundra, rushing in fast, fumbled the ball, but there could have been no play to catch the flying Judnich under any curcumstances.

A two-bagger by Johnny Lucadello brought the Browns a 1-0 lead in the first inning, and then the Nats moved out in front in the second. Vernon doubled to left with one out and stole third as Archie fanned. Early got Vernon home by beating out a hit to Berardino, and then it was that Bloodworth

Indians Down Red Sox Twice, Gain 3d Place

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 24.—Cleveland's Indians climbed past Boston into third place today by giving the Red Sox a double defeat, 4 to 3 and 5 to 2, in their first twin killing since July 13 against the same team.

It was a battle of southpaw pitchers, Al Milmna taking the first from Mickey Harris and Al Smith topping Earl Johnson in the second.

To win the first contest, Cleveland had to stave off a ninth inning rally, when doubles by Jimmy Foxx and Dom Dimaggio drove in the Sox' only run. After Ken Keltner's twentieth homer had opened the scoring in the second, Cleveland got its remaining runs in the fifth, two of them resulting from a wild throw by Manager Joe Cronin.

Gee Walker's third-inning single shoved in two runs which tied the score of the second game, after which the Indians sewed up the verdict with three runs in the sixth, manufactured out of two singles, Johnny Peacock's wild throw and Jeff Heath's double.

Tigers Defeat A's, 7-4, Behind Hurler Benton

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 24.—Big Al Benton, yanked out of the relief class this year, won his ninth game of the season today as the Detroit Tigers, behind his eight-hit pitching, defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 4, in the opening series game.

Every Tiger except Benton, who hasn't had a hit in two years, and Rudy York made at least one hit in pounding Starter Les McCrabb and Jack Knott for 14 blows that included a triple and a homer by Tucker Stainback.

Detroit clinched the game in the fourth inning, scoring two runs on Stainback's three-bagger and singles by Charley Gehringer and Pinky Higgins, to add to a three-run lead. Single runs crossed the plate in the fifth and sixth.

Benton shut out the Athletics until the fifth, when singles by Sam Chapman and Fred Chapman produced a run. Philadelphia scored two more in the sixth and rallied in the ninth for another tally.

Wyatt Wins Own Game With Single In Nightcap; Flock Holds Slim Lead

By Bob Considine

New York, Aug. 24.—The pennant hungry Dodgers tottered dizzily today, under the surprising attack of a Cardinal team that had suffered more casualties than the Russians. But at the end of five hours of nerve-wracking baseball, Brooklyn still retained its game and a half lead over St. Louis.

The struggling clubs split a double-header that was witnessed by 31,523, after police estimated that another 30,000 had been turned away from the locked gates.

Ernie White, brilliant young Cardinal southpaw, won the opener, 7-3. But in the aftermath, bald old Whitlow Wyatt and the veteran Dixie Walker combined to hand young Howard Pollet a 3-2 loss, with Wyatt winning his own game in the ninth with a sharp single to center.

Play of the Year

At the end of the first game, the irrepressible Cards stood only one-half game out of first place. At the end of the first half of the eighth inning of the second game, after Creepy Crespi had tied the score 2-2 with a blooper to right, it seemed to be in the cards for the Cards to go into first place.

After tying the count in this second game, Crespi then turned in one of the plays of the year to stop the Dodgers from recapturing the lead in the last half of the same eighth. With the "winning run" scoring from second, and two outs, Crespi made a miraculous stop and throw off Dolf Camilli's sizzling grounder, to retire the side.

But young Pollet was not destined to win. The kid who came up from Houston only last week, and won his first start, got in trouble at the opening of the last half of the ninth. Pee Wee Reese dropped a perfect bunt that caught the willowing young lefthander flatfooted. Mickey Owen sacrificed Reese to second. Then Wyatt, in answer to a thunderous ovation from the crowd, came through with the single that preserved the Dodger lead and gave Wyatt his seventeenth victory of the season.

Medwick Hits Homer

In racking up his fourth victory of the year over the Dodgers, and his sixteenth triumph of the campaign, White gave up nine hits. But he knew when to give them. Besides, the Cardinals, though missing the punch of Slaughter and Moore, fell on Kirby Higbe like a tramp on a Corona-Corona butt. They belted Higbe off the hill in less than three innings with a six-hit and three-run barrage that included three doubles. Elderly Larry French discouraged them for the next few innings, but they got to him in the sixth and drove him away with a three-run rally, climaxed by Johnny Hopp's double with the bases filled.

In all, the Cards smacked 12 hits in the first game, 7 of them doubles. Most of the Dodger punch was supplied by Joe Medwick, who hit his seventeenth home run of the year in the fourth.

The turning point of the game came with two outs in the sixth, and two on base. Cookie Lavagetto played a roller as if he had ten thumbs. It put Jimmy Brown on base, in fact filled the bases, and

6 World Records Set in Baltimore Regatta

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 24—Six new world's records were claimed today by speed pilots in the Baltimore Yacht Club's third annual regatta on Middle River, Chesapeake Bay.

The first mark was smashed by W. Earl Orem, Cambridge, Md., who piloted his Pacific One hydroplane over a five-mile course at an average speed of 51.843 miles an hour, beating the old record of 45.801 M.P.H. set last year at Red Bank, N. J., by Irving W. Barney, Fall River, Mass.

Jack (Pop) Cooper, Kansas City veteran, raised his own mark established last week in the 91-cubic inch hydroplanes by almost three miles an hour, winning today in 56.426 miles an hour.

In Class C racing runabouts Frank Foulke, Essex, Md., covered the distance in 46.875 M. P. H., shattering the old mark of 43.881 set by Edison Hedges, Atlantic City, N. J., yesterday, at Ocean City, N. J.

Henry Davis, of Granogue, Del., raised the 183-inch hydroplane class record from 56.639 miles an hour to 58.325. The old mark was set in California last year by Dudley Valentine.

Another mark set last Sunday at Red Bank—the Class D racing runabouts—was broken by Barclay Stevenson, Torresdale, Pa., at 49.641 M. P. H. The old record of 45.478 was set by Tommy Erhart, York, Pa.

In the Class A racing runabout, Dr. Martin Haurin, Gooch, Pa., traveled 43.409 M. P. H. to break the former mark of 44.183.

Holly Manly Low Scorer In Practice

First of Two 18-Hole Qualifying Rounds Scheduled Today; No Real Favorite

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

Omaha, Aug. 24.—Having cracked the Field Club's par for nothing better than a scattering of hard-won 70's and a single 69 in a full week of practice, the country's top-flight amateur golfers entertained a mounting respect for its testing qualities tonight on the eve of the U. S. Golf Association's forty-fifth championship.

With the exception of such rounds as today's three-under-par 69 by Harold H. (Holly) Manly, former New England champion from Avon, Conn., and a 70 by the willowly young Brazilian, Mario Ganzales, the Field Club has stood up against the best efforts of such reputable craftsmen as Dick Chapman, the defending champion; Marvin (Bud) Ward, the 1939 winner and current favorite; Harry Todd, the curly-haired Texan from Dallas, and Ray Billows, the young printing salesman from Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) who in the last five championships has gone to the final twice and once each has been a semifinalist and quarter-finalist.

What's more, on most of the holes the players haven't been using the back tees. They'll get on those when the actual competition begins at 8 a. m., central standard time, tomorrow, and the extra yardage isn't going to make the going any easier

Eighteen-Hole Qualifying

The program for the week calls for 18-hole qualifying rounds tomorrow and Tuesday. The 64 low scorers will start match play on Wednesday, with two 18-hole rounds then and Thursday, the 36-hole semifinals Friday and the 36-hole final on Saturday.

(Ralph Bogart, the District of Columbia amateur champion and the city's only representative, will play at 10:48 with Lloyd H. Ramsey, Lexington, Ky., and Glenn Oatman, Kansas City, Mo. Other Middle Atlantic section representatives are Eddie Johnston and Ootto Greiner, Balimore, and Walter Cushman, Charlottesville, Va.)

Among the players and the sideline experts the winner is expected generally to be one of a threesome—Ward, who is hitting the ball well and knows it and doesn't expect much penalty from a current putting weakness because the condition of the greens will put everyone on even terms; Billows, who numbered Ward among his victims in the Great Lakes Invitation at Chicago the past week, and Tod, who lost to Ward in the Western Amateur final in July after having been low amateur in the United States Open the previous month.

But there also is considerable feeling that this may be one of the most wide-open scrambles in recent years. There is, certainly, no individual who stands head or even shoulders above the rest, and the group of players capable of hitting a hot streak and carrying it through the week is a long one—among them Chapman, who was brilliant over his home course a year ago; Gonzales, who holds the Brazilian and Argentine titles and shouldn't be handicapped here by lack of length of the tees; Art Doering, of Chicago, as stylish a swinger as any in the field; Bruce McCormick, the Los Angeles fireman who has been hitting the ball exceptionally well, and Stocky Johnny Goodman, one of five former winners and the lad who knows the course better than anyone, it being his home club.

A field of 146 is expected to start, and 145 of them were on hand tonight. The other place, if filled, will go to an alternate from the Chicago district, which lost a representative today when big John Barnum, Mexican amateur winner the last two years, withdrew.

Galan Headed For Dodgers

Brooklyn, Aug. 24 (AP).—Following today's doubleheader with St. Louis, President L. S. MacPhail, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, announced that "subject to confirmation by President Dave Fleming, of the Los Angeles club," he had made a deal for Outfielder Augie Galan, whom the Chicago Cubs sent down last week.

Galan had refused to report to the Pacific Coast club and was present at Ebbets Field today.

Details of the Dodgers' deal with Los Angeles were not disclosed. The Brooklyn club has its limit of 25 players and would have to dispose of one to make room for Galan, who was with the Cubs for seven years and had a lifetime batting average of .279 before this year.

Reds Register Twin Victories Over Giants

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 24—The high flying Reds took both ends of today's double bill with the Giants. With Harry Craft hitting two homers and driving in six runs and Lonnie Frey sending five tallies across, they outslugged the Giants in the opener 13 to 9. Elmer Riddle hung up his 15th victory as they downed the Giants in the nightcap 6 to 4.

Bucky Walters, Reds ace, saw relief duty in both games and both times stopped late Giant uprisings.

Riddle, though he failed to finish the second game, batted in two runs with singles and gave up but eight hits.

The Reds hit for 32 bases in the opener with a home run by Bill Werber, two by Craft and one by Lonnie Frey featuring their attack.

An eight run rally in the sixth, in which Craft's second homer came with the bases full, put the damper on the Giants.

Dick Bartell of the Giants got on base seven consecutive times, twice on walks and four times on hits in the opener, and then walked on his initial time up in the nightcap.

Patsy Palmer Sets New D. C. Record in 220-Yard Freestyle

Time of 2:50.2 Set in Races At W.G.C.C.; McAdoo Scores

Setting a new District record in the 220-yard free style with the time of 2:50.2, Patsy Palmer upheld honors for her Shoreham Swimming Club team at the Washington Golf and Country Club races yesterday afternoon. Miss Palmer became the only two-time victor of the day by also annexing the women's low board diving event.

In the free style race the young local girl turned back a teammate, Jean Brunson, and Phoebe Hudson, of the host club.

Jackie Richards, unattached, was second to Miss Palmer in the diving, with Airport Pool's Bunny Sheridan third.

Airport again came through in the men's high board diving as Mick Sheridan won top place, with Bill Tarbett, of the same team, second. Washington Golf Club's John Marshall was third.

Still another Airport entrant, Howard McAdoo, took the men's 220-yard free style in the time of 2:23.4, over Washington's Bill Wright and Gordon Mustin, who finished in that order.

SWIMMING NOTES—Washington Golf and Country's widely traveled representatives did well on another front . . . In the Virginia State A. A. U. meet on Shields Lake, in Richmond, the local team took third place and 23 points in the open division . . . The feminine members piled up 44 markers and second place among the mermaids . . . Sam Baugh's Arm Injury Only Slight

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 24.—Sammy Baugh's right arm, the Redskins' No. 1 offensive weapon, has been ailing for the past several days. The Texan received a knock on his arm last Wednesday and for the first time during his football career he developed soreness.

The slight injury has caused little concern, however, and after resting his arm Friday and Saturday, Baugh was pitching again in today's workout.

Despite the arm condition, Baugh was in the thick of yesterday's scrimmage. A sore muscle here and a turned ankle there, were the only aftermaths of the strenuous Saturday session. However, Coach Ray Flaherty eased up on the players today and the drill was shortest thus far.

Place kicking was tried for the first time. Those who did the booting were Joe Aguirre, the giant end, who looked best; Sam Goldman, Sandy Sanford, Dick Todd and Andy Farkas. This was another test for Farkas' leg and he reported no ill effects. Two other members of the squad who had leg operations since last season, Ed Justice and Mickey Parks, are getting about in fine fashion.

Recreation Tennis Title To Johnsen

Leavens Beaten In Straight Sets; Margo Lee Mahony Takes Women's Title

By Anne Hagner

Presenting to net followers every brand of tennis that could possibly be dreamed up, Davy Johnsen defeated Don Leavens, 12—10, 6—0, 14—12, for the men's singles title of the District Recreation Department tourney yesterday on the Reservoir courts.

In three hours and five minutes of up-and-down tennis, Johnsen ended all controversy on the season-old argument of comparative superiority of the two, who had never met in a half-dozen previous tourneys.

Earlier in the day Margo Lee Mahony overcame a 4-2 lead by Sarah Moore to win ten straight games and win the finals of the women's singles, 7—5, 6—0. Miss Moore achieved her early advantage by means of a decisive forehand, but a short let-up in her style was sufficient to give Mrs. Mahony an opening for effective drop shots that meant ultimate victory.

1000 See Match

The near endless duel between Johnsen and Leavens was the spectacle of the day, however, as nearly 1000 fans jammed the edges of the court and overflowed on the roadside during the first set.

Close line decisions and inability to cope with Davey's brilliant overhead shots combined to prove the undoing of Leavens in the opener. The blond Californian was chased all over the court by Johnsen's almost unlimited bag of tricks, so that by the time the second set rolled around, Leavens was thoroughly wearied.

Obviously coasting a bit to save his strength for the all-important third set, Don did not extend himself in the second and it was over almost before it started, in contrast with the long first. Devey won as he pleased, 6—0.

Leavens Ties Match

Apparently Don had trouble settling down in the early moments of the third as Johnsen took a 3-0 lead. Then the familiar Leavens form of earlier matches this season emerged to bring the score to 4-all, beginning a long series of service-breaking on both sides.

As both players wilted rapidly under the strain, errors popped up on all sides to reduce spectator-interest somewhat. Still Johnsen held the edge, but he missed many chances for an early kill. Double-faults on three set points, one of them a match point, were among his weakest points.

Anything Davey lacked in consistency he made up in form, which experts estimated as equal to top tennis players anywhere in the Nation.

Whether the return to Reservoir's yellow clay courts, after seven weeks of playing on grass, will hurt Johnsen's game will not be known until the National at Forest Hills next week, when he and District Champion Barney Welsh will again play on grass courts. They leave tomorrow for early practice.

Burnett Wins at Indian Spring; Three Visiting Golf Teams Bow

Mrs. H. Hildebrand Makes Hole-in-One At Beaver Dam Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Volney G. Burnett clung to the remnants of what once was a 5-hole lead to win the Indian Spring Club championship for the third time in seven years yesterday, beating Jock Olmstead, 2 and 1, in the 36-hole finals.

The bespectacled, 31-year-old District fireman, who won the Maryland State Amateur championship in June for the second time, thus added the toughest of the local club crowns to win to his victory string this season.

Burnett was down only once, at the fifth hole of the morning round but he squared it on the sixth and turned the first nine all square. At the halfway mark Burnett's lead was two up.

Volney then played three-under par golf for the net eight holes and stood on the twenty-seventh tee with a 3-hole advantage. Olmstead won the ninth, or twenty-seventh, to cut it to four and was a threat all the way on the final nine holes but Burnett finally clinched the title on the thirty-fifth green. Olmstead qualified for the finals by beating Dick Melvin, with a par on the last hole on Saturday, 1 up.

Burnett won the title in 1935 and '36 and was followed by Buddy Sharkey the next two years and Roger Peacock in 1939 and '40.

Harold Gordon and John DeFino will play their second flight final this week. Frank O'Connell won the third 16, 3 and 2, over Charles Wells and Marty Gordon. Harold's father, captured the fourth, beating F. B. Maize, 6 and 5.

Mr. and Mrs. K. S. Giles won gross honors in the Indian Spring mixed scotch foursome with an even 90, while Mrs. J. B. Robertson and Jerry Enright won low net by six strokes over Mrs. Enright and Robertson with respective scores of 92-23, 69, and 97-22, 75. Mrs. Frank Mirth and Earl Clary, 90-1, 76, tied with Mrs. W. F. Patterson and Frank Mirth, 98-22, 76, for the third low net prize.

ARMY AND NAVY

Army and Navy Club members squared the annual series with the Country Club of Virginia members by winning a return match over the service club course by a 12½-11½ score yesterday. The Richmonders had previously won over their home course.

L. V. Steele played well enough in the match but he was even better in a round preceding the team encounter as he posted a three-under par 69 in a round with Pro Allan Burton, tying the best score ever posted by a club member.

Ray Lawrenson's Argyle Club team maintained its winning record over its home course by swamping the visiting Front Royal linksmen, 32½ to 3½ at Argyle. The Front Royal women's team gained partial revenge, however, by defeating the Argyle women's team, 5-4.

Meanwhile Argyle members continued qualifying in the club championship with two-over-par 74s by Dick Mothershead and Tony Willmett still tied for medal honors.

Women golfers at East Potomac paired up in scotch foursome play with three teams finishing in the prize list, Grace Long and Doris Costello, Mrs. M. L. Cummings and Jesse Coch and Peggy Curran and Mrs. G. Bruns.

BEAVER DAM

Mrs. H. Hildebrand made women's golf history at Beaver Dam yesterday, making what Pro Al Houghton said was the first hole-in-one ever scored by a feminine golfer at the Landover club. The shot was a lofted spoon on the 135-yard fifth hole which landed on the green and trickled into the cup. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Dyer and Mrs. Hildebrand's husband were members of the foursome.

Eddie Bean matched par 72 figures to win gross honors in the sweepstakes while the low net scores were turned in by Dr. R. V. Kelley, 98-30, 68; Fred Cross, 77-18, 70, and D. N. Pratt, 83-13, 70.

Russell Withstands Challenge To Take Blind Golfers' Title

By the Associated Press

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 24.—Wider experience and sounder golf paid for defending champion Clint Russell, of Duluth, at Northland Country Club today as he turned back the challenge of Marvin Shannon, Fort Worth, Tex., for the world blind golfers' championship. Russell won, 2 up.

Hampered by a chill wind that played havoc with distance and direction, the two blind men thrilled a large gallery with an exhibition that was the more spectacular because staged under such adverse conditions.

As a fitting climax to a match that had seen him around the turn 1 up, and that had promised thrill upon thrill in long wood shots and amazingly accurate irons, Russell sank a 10-foot putt to win the eighteenth.

Shannon, whose professional—C. W. (Skeet) Fincher, of Rockwood Municipal Golf Course, Fort Worth—acted as his eyes, missed an opportunity to square the match on the seventeenth, when his 10-foot putt skidded around the side of the cup and popped out. Blind for 15 years and a golfer before then, Russell had the edge most of the way, although a rally by the Texan on the second nine twice squared the match. Shannon never held the lead.

Their cards:

Par out	444	534	435—36
Russell out	777	755	539—55
Shannon out	787	955	548—56
Par in	453	454	434—36— 72

Strong Field Entered in Midget Derby Tuesday

One of the finest fields ever assembled on an Eastern track will compete in the first annual Southern States Derby at the West Lanham Speedway Tuesday night. This event will be held in conjunction with six other midget auto races, the prize money totaling $3000 for the program.

Probably the most outstanding driver on the list will be Wild Bill Holmes, a reputation competitor of long standing, who will be making his debut at West Lanham. Holmes has scored brilliant victories from coast to coast within the past five years and was a smash hit at the old Capital Speedway two years ago.

Holmes will resume an old and fierce rivalry with Broncho Bill Schindler, the one-legged wizard whose daring and will to win compare with that of Wild Bill. These feudists staged several memorable duels at the old Capital Speedway back in 1939 and their rivalry has extended to other tracks within the past two years.

An interesting newcomer will be Don Morris, a speed specialist from the Southwest, while contestants who may qualify as dark horses will be spotlighted in Harry Harper, the Philadelphia favorite who has seen little action at Lanham, and Frank Beebe, one of the better drivers who will be back on the job in his neat No. 88 job.

Other reputation entries will be Jim Forte, Henry Steiger, Bill Baker, Walt Walker, Johnny Ringer, Len Duncan, Andy Furci, Bill Troutwine, Mike Joseph, Joe Sheppard and Henry Pierson.

Tickets purchased for last Tuesday's postponed races will be honored and a good advance sale continue in progress at the Standard Capitol Servicenter, Third Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest, until 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, at which time the sale reverts to the Speedway.

Claudio Villar Scores Hit in Training for Wednesday Fight

Spaniard To Engage Pat Comiskey

Good-Looking Boxer Listed for 10-Round Fight; Workout Pleases Spectators

By Tony Neri

The first Washington appearance of Claudio Villar, handsome Spanish heavyweight, was an impressive one as he staged an hour's drill at Turner's Arena yesterday.

Villar was accompanied here by Jess Losada, his manager, who also is a sportswriter and radio commentator in Havana, Cuba.

The 26-year-old fighter is scheduled to meet Pat Comiskey, of New Jersey, in a ten-round bout on Wednesday night's card at Griffith Stadium, which features a 25-rounder between Eddie Blunt and Bill Poland.

It didn't take Villar very long to attract the fancy of the 300 spectators as he pounded Horace Jones around the ring with a vaunted two-fisted attack.

Sets Furious Pace

The 205-pound Spaniard set a furious pace and, although Jones was greatly outweighed, Villar showed he possessed the prime requisites of an experienced fighter.

First reports on Villar had the good-looking heavyweight hailing from South America, but actually he is a native of the Iberian Peninsula and lived in France up until the time the Nazis invaded. He was unsuccessful in his intended enlistment in the French army so returned to Spain, only to be seized and thrown into a concentration camp for not enlisting in Gen. Franco's cause. He was a prisoner for a year and a half before being released.

Villar has spent the past six months in Cuba, where he resumed his boxing career after that interruption in Spain. He has scored five straight knockouts, his latest victim being Maxie Doyle of Syracuse, in the first heat of a scheduled 10-round fight last Saturday in Havana. Jay D. Turner and Al Williams were chilled in matches in Tampa this summer.

Villar doesn't speak a word of English, allowing Losada, who speaks it fluently, to act as interpreter.

Educated in New York

Losada received his high school education in New York City, where he attended Stuyvesant High School.

Besides managing Villar and handling newspaper and radio jobs, Losada is in charge of the Foreign Press Relations of the Cuban National Sports Association. This department is headed by Col. Marine. Cuba is currently engaged in a vast sports program which includes an amateur baseball series with South American countries.

Lee Savold, opponent of Buddy Scott, worked three rounds with Blunt. The blond battler from Des Moines, Iowa., was recently knocked out by Harry Bobo, rugged Pittsburgh Negro. He has been fighting since he was 15 years old. Savold weighs 187 pounds and is 24. He is managed by Hymie Wiseman.

The arena at Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest, will be open today when 10,000 general admission tickets will be put on sale.

Bob Klinger's Victory Earns Split for Bucs

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 24.—Bob Klinger won his eighth consecutive game for the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7 to 3, today after a 12-inning opener in which the Boston Braves twice came from behind to snatch a 4 to 3 decision.

The veteran Klinger, who won his last seven games in relief performances, limited the Braves to seven hits—three by former teammate Paul Waner—in a game shortened to six innings by the Massachusetts Sunday baseball law.

In the first game, Carvel Rowell, the Braves' second baseman, who had committed three errors afield, punched a line single to left field, scoring Johnny Cooney with the winning run in the twelfth. Cooney had walked and moved into scoring position on a sacrifice bunt.

Vince DiMaggio hit his seventeenth home run and third in three days for the Pirates, who left 14 men on base.

Dodgers, Cards Divide Games Before 31,523

The Cards got off to a 1-0 lead in the first inning of the second game, to the groans of the Brooklyn population. Hopp's drag bunt and one-base knocks by Mize and Triplett provided the run.

But the Dodgers went out in front in the fourth, after Pollet had easily retired the first two men. The two-run Dodger rally started mildly enough when Owen beat out a hit to second. After getting two strikes on Wyatt, against no balls, Pollet walked his pitching rival. He had two strikes on Walker, too, but Dixie leaned over after a wide pitch and sliced it down the left field foul line to score both men.

Triplett's double with two outs in the eighth was the opening note in the Cards' tying rally. Crespi's subsequent blooper just barely slithered off Billy Herman's glove. Triplett scored and the Cards were all set to move into first place, in the most kee-rooshiai series of the National League pennant race. But old Whit wouldn't let 'em.

Redhot Phils Capture Pair From Chicubs

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—The Phillies, still in last place of the National League but currently playing like wild-fire, unleashed two styles of baseball today to sweep a double-header from the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 5 and 7 to 6.

In the first game under the urging of acting Manager John Hans Lobert while Doc Prothro searches for new talent, the Phils ran wild on the bases, stealing six on catcher Clyde McCullough of the Cubs.

In the second contest they laid down a barrage of home runs, Danny Litwhiler getting his second of the afternoon and Stan Benjamin and Joe Marty one each.

But in the second the Phils needed a ninth inning rally to win after the Cubs tied it up in their half of the inning. Trailing 6-3, the Cubs drove Frank Melton from the mound, then Ike Pearson before Southpaw Frank Hoerst could get the final man out with the bases loaded. Merrill May's double drove in Joe Marty with the winning run after Marty singled.

'Touch' Play On Program For Friday

Phil Fox to Speak As Young Football Aspirants Open 2d Week's Classes Today

Members of The Washington Post's popular football school, opening its second week's stand at Eastern High Stadium today will participate in the first scholastic grid game of the season, it was revealed last night by the school's head coach, Sam Fox.

Players will be divided in two groups this week, Fox said, and a regulation game between the groups will be staged at Friday's last session. The only departure from the real thing will be the substitution of touching with both hands for tackling. Blocking, actual plays and all the other portions of the game will be retained.

Fox will take charge of one side and Jim O'Leary, The Post school's backfield mentor, will handle the other.

Meanwhile, today's program will be highlighted by the "guest" appearance of Phil Fox, Eastern High coach. Phil will discuss training methods and various formations, after which demonstrations will be in order. Calesthenics as well as a review of fundamentals taught last week will again be in order.

Tomorrow's "guest" coach will be Hardy Pearce, new head of the public school department of health and physical education. Thursday's schedule is featured by the appearance of Orrel Mitchell, of Georgetown Prep, discussing this year's new rules and changes in the old rules.

Bill Cunningham's Column

Sports Organizing to Give Selectees 'Lift'

Standing around wringing the hands won't do any good. Writing letters saying this and propounding that won't help any, either.

Cunningham

We've got an Army. It seems to be pretty well established that it's down in the dumps. The term "lack of morale" has been kicked around pretty freely, and just maybe that's an unfortunate choice of phrase.

If anybody's got any idea that that means lack of courage, he'd better recheck data, as the artillerymen say. There's always going to be crabbing and griping in any man's army. That's as much part of the game as the uniform.

There are a few things to be remembered. We're not officially at war. The formal declaration probably would make an instantaneous difference. Our public isn't sold on the idea that we're going to get into one, or even that we should get into one. That's a reportorial statement, not a statement of opinion, and proof of it is plentiful—the President's own statement to the press being the most serious official comment.

Our Army is down, not in loyalty and not in willingness if the clutch comes for my money. It's simply disgusted and bored to death doing nothing. The lend-lease business has sent most of the arms it ought to have overseas. Its training to date has been mostly dull, empty-handed marching back and forth across dusty parade grounds, raking rocks, cutting grass and other flub-dubs and stop-gaps.

The soldiers write; their folks write; concerned citizens write. You'd be amazed at how much of it reiterates loyalty to America and willingness to serve but disgust with the boredom and the heaviness with which time hangs on the hands of fellows with which not much of anywhere to go and not much, if any, money to spend after they get there.

And if there's a common denominator anywhere in it, it's the cry from many quarters, "Why doesn't somebody do something?"

Up to now, nobody has.

This is notice to the effect that somebody's starting to.

About the guns, and all—that's over our heads—but some of us feel as if we can do a powerful something about those empty hours. What probably is going to be one of the hardest hitting committees in the history of volunteer service has just got itself met and fairly on the way toward complete organization. It's an organization of big name sports writers and radio guys, football coaches, a college Director of Athletics or two, the Commissioners of a couple of Conferences and similar gents from coast to coast and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes.

With the full blessings of the Army and Navy fully cognizant of the organizational problems besetting each after conferring with their top executives, we're going to turn the full power of the world of sports from coast to coast and from Genesis to Revelation behind these kids, around 'em and even in front of 'em for the duration.

The organization we've started and which met in New York is only a skeleton. We're going to rally our brethern on every paper and every radio station in the land. Our resources are practically limitless, so far as we can see. We've been assured coast to coast network radio time for any great progams we can work out in order that the public may sit in on the show, for one thing.

The sports world is definitely putting on the uniform to get in there with those kids, and help them spend their spare hours. We figure there are sports books sports movies, and sports figures who can make swell talks. There's Babe Ruth and Gene Tunny and Joe DiMaggio and Squire Jack Sharkey. There's a move kicking around somewhere that shows the knockout of every important fight for the last 25 years. We're getting that off the shelf, for one thing. There are those American and National League baseball movies.

Winter nights are coming. It wouldn't take more than a couple of those to fill up an evening. We've got already the football teams of the Pacific Coast Conference to agree to donate their movies of this coming season's games. We're going to try the rest of the colleges—Notre Dame, for instance, the Army, the Navy, the Sugar Bowl, the Rose Bowl and all the big league rest.

And here's why I'm telling you. You're on that committee, too. This is as much your Army, as it is ours, maybe more for some of it may be your own kith and kin. Send us your suggestions. This includes, Soldier and Sailor. What are your ideas? Maybe you've got just the one we're looking for. What do you think the boys would like to see, or do or hear? Let us know. We'll tackle anything and are pretty sure we can deliver anything or anybody—except maybe Hitler and he's not so hot on a platform. I've heard him.

Your suggestions will all be considered, and if they look like the goods, we'll go right on to the top with them, and if the Army and Navy approve—and each has given us some swell guys to work with—maybe it's your idea that really will set this Army singing.

They've got a job to do. So've we—helping them soldier it.

What do you suggest? Let's hear from you.

Orange Disc Tops Florists; Heurich Wins

Orange Disc, a rank outsider in Capital City "A" League reckonings, continued to keep pace with the Heurich Brewers yesterday as a full day's action was staged on the Ellipse.

Behind the heady pitching of Kimmel and Webb, the Disc nine smashed Jacobsen Florists, 7 to 2, for its fourth straight triumph in the second half. Heurich, with young Doz Olson pitching three-hit ball over the route, also won its fourth in a row, a 2-to-0 shutout over Frank Small.

In another "A" section game, Naiman Photo came from behind to top Taft A. C., 12 to 8. Miller Furniture's first-half winners profited by a forfeit over Prince Georges Boys Club.

Section "B" hostilities saw Perry's Restaurant outslug Pepsi-Cola, 9 to 8, and Kronheim Liquors nose out Southern Oxygen, 3 to 2.

Washington Flour and Police Boys Club No. 4 each claimed two victories in the junior division, though they actually played only one. The first stopped Central Branch, W. B. C., by a 10-to-3 count, and took a forfeit from Friendship House. Police Boys edged the Cardinal A. C., 7 to 5, and then claimed another victory from Friendship, also a forfeit.

Center Market Nine Engages Heurich Today in Title Series

Launched by a clash between the Heurich Brewers and Center Market, the second week of the local National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament opens at 4:30 today on the East Ellipse.

Tomorrow Naval Air nine comes to grips with St. Elizabeths, and Wednesday the winner of today's engagement faces the winner tomorrow. The complete pairings will be made after the latter game.

Though strongly favored to repeat their 1940 triumph in the tourney which decides Washington's entry in the N. A. B. F. meet in Youngstown, Ohio, on September 6, the Brewers today meet a dangerous foe. The Center has lost one game already in the two-defeats-and-out competition, and thus will be "all out" for victory. Naval Air inflicted the loss, 4-1, after the first game between the teams had ended in a tie.

Heurich boasts a 4-3 triumph over Veterans Administration, but not very noisily. The Vets, who became the first club to bow out yesterday, when they lost a 15-1 nod to St. Elizabeths, were concededly the weakest club in competition.

Cameo Nine Scores Over Frederick, 5-3

Frederick, Md., Aug. 24.—The Cameo Furniture Co. nine, of Washington, showed little respect for Maryland's semipro champions today by conquering the Frederick Hustlers, 5 to 3, before a large crowd at McCurdy Field. The Hustlers returned yesterday from the national semipro tournament at Wichita, Kans.

The Hustlers were unable to solve the offerings of Jennings, Cameo righthander, who limited them to seven scattered hits. Big offensive gun for the visitors was Bonifant, who connected for a triple and home run in four times up.

Lefty Warrenfeltz, who relieved Fraley in the sixth, set the visitors down with one hit.

Finns 18 Miles From Viipuri, They Assert

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Aug. 24.—Finnish troops driving down the strategic Saimaa Canal north of Viipuri, formerly Finland's second largest city, were reported tonight to have captured Rattijarvi, within 18 miles of the old Karelian capital won by the Russians in the winter war of 1939-40.

The push down the canal was just one phase of the newly opened Finnish encircling offensive against Viipuri.

A spearhead from the west, complementing the earlier operations across the Vuoki River to the east and south, was said to have captured Sekkijarvi, about 20 miles from Viipuri, and the scene of some of the bloodiest fighting of the 1939-40 war when Soviet soldiers crossed frozen Viipuri Bay.

(Apparently Nuijamaa was captured by the troops which moved on to take Rattijarvi.

Army correspondents at the front reported Finnish casualties were "insignificant."

They said numerous villages left by the Russians escaped much devastation owing to the rapidity of the Finnish operations but that evidence was found where the Russians hastily but vainly attempted to carry out the scorched earth policy decreed in July by Joseph Stalin.

It was reported officially that Karjaa and Koski were bombed Saturday but no damaged was caused. It was said eight Russian planes were shot down.

Official reports also said the Finnish air force bombed Red trains and motor columns.

Brick-Tosser Lets Fly as Police Arrive

Two Metropolitan Police privates from No. 1 Precinct were on hand to make an arrest last night before the offense had occurred.

The two privates, O. S. Schelin and P. E. Marquis, were driving on Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest when they spotted a man contemplating a plate glass store window at Pennsylvania and D Street with a brick in his hand. As they got out of the scout car to halt the brick-thrower, he let fly with the missile, smashed the window and was promptly taken into custody. While they loaded him into the car, a police call came over the cruiser radio: "Burglar alarm ringing at Pennsylvania and D." The window-breaker, a 37-year-old Negro, was held for investigation.

To keep their record intact, the two policemen also recovered a pair of Army uniforms taken from the car of a Fort Pendleton private, parked on the 100 block of F Street Northwest, about an hour and a half later. Sent to investigate the looting of the car, they picked up a couple of witnesses, toured the neighborhood until three boys were pointed out as suspects, made the arrest and recovered the uniforms.

Escaped Convict, Wanted in Slaying, Surrenders

Richmond, Aug. 24 (AP).—Maj. Rice M. Youell, superintendent of the State penitentiary, announced tonight that Walter L. Ross, 21-year-old escaped convict sought for questioning in the hitch-hike slaying of Fred W. Boyce, Lansdowne, Pa., automobile dealer, last April 14, had given himself up and been returned to the prison.

Walter H. Carter, commonwealth's attorney of Amherst County, said shortly afterward that he had sworn out a warrant charging Ross with the murder of Boyce. The Pennsylvanian died soon after he was found lying beside Route 29 near Piney River in Amherst County. A .32 calibre bullet had severed his spinal artery.

When he escaped April 10 from a Virginia convict camp, Ross, a former member of the U. S. Marine Corps, was serving a term of 10 years, Carter said, on conviction of second degree murder in Stafford County for the slaying of Elmer A. Davidson, Washington attorney.

Icelanders, Here for Talks, Laud Troops

The American forces in Iceland have made "a very good impression" on the population of the island and have been welcomed as "ambassadors of good will," according to an Icelandic trade delegation which has arrived here to confer with United States officials today.

The three-man delegation is in Washington to negotiate questions of finance, trade and shipping raised by the new relationship between the two countries since American occupation. The envoys were welcomed by Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, upon their arrival Saturday.

In recent years, the delegates said, Iceland has endeavored to call American attention to opportunities for industrial capital in the country. They pointed out by way of example that Iceland spent more money per capita than any other Nation for that she had founded a trade comher World's Fair participatoin, and missioner's office in New York in 1939 and a consulate in the same city last year.

The group is headed by Vilhjalmur Thor, managing director of the National Bank of Iceland and formerly consul general and World's Fair commissioner in New York. The other members are Asgeir Asgeirsson, former prime minister of Iceland, and Bjorn Olafsson, member of the Anglo-Icelandic Joint Standing Committee.

At almost the same time that the delegation arrived in Washington, Secretary of State Hull issued a general license authorizing the exportation to Iceland of all articles and materials now under export control except 15 considered essential war or raw materials.

British Trawler Shoots Bomber Down Into Sea

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 24.—A twin-engined German bomber believed to have been a Dornier was shot down into the sea by the trawler Brabant, which suffered no casualties or damage, the admiralty announced today.

Tracer bullets from the ships' antiaircraft guns set the Nazi plane's port engine afire. The plane dropped its bombs, all of which missed the trawler, but the ship's fire held until the plane was passing over the vessel at about 150 feet, and sent it crashing into the sea about a half mile away.

British fighter squadrons ranged over northern France today in a series of offensive patrols to attack hangars, barracks, docks, troops and gun positions, the air ministry stated tonight. Little fighter opposition was encountered, the ministry said.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—A tale of thousands of virtual desert slaves "living like beasts" to push the Vichy-sponsored trans-Sahara railroad through French North Africa to Dakar was told today by a German-born refugee who worked four months on the project.

J. H. Westreich, 36-year-old former motion picture executive who obtained his release from the French Foreign Legion by showing he was under contract to an American film company, told of the desert hardships on arrival on the Spanish line ships on arrival on the Spanish line Magallanes with 100 other passen-

Paint or Stain Shingle Roofs

All shingle roofs should be either painted or stained. Such materials, when left unfinished constitute a fire hazard. The surface tends to become warped, cracked and "fuzzy," affording ready lodgment for sparks from hearth fires or trash.

The fire-retardant qualities of paint and varnish offer considerable resistance to ignition.

As an item for the biologically-minded—and, incidentally, to show you the untold versatility of this thing called radio—it should be noted that, as of today, reproduction by division is no longer confined to the amoeba alone.

Starting over WJSV at 10:30 a. m. today comes a new dramatic serial called "Bright Horizons." It's to be heard every weekday at the same time and will detail the adventures of one Michael West, who, you may be sure, will have lots to say and be said about.

Now this may sound like a routine announcement of a new and independent radio serial, but we hasten to add that it's nothing of the sort. For Michael West has been heard on the radio right along.

He's a character in the perennial radio serial, "Big Sister," which you've been hearing over C. B. S. for many years.

And "Bright Horizons" merely doubles, for the time being, his place in the scheme of daytime radio. For some weeks the two programs will sort of mesh, with leading personalities to be heard in both. Then, presumably, Michael West will strike out entirely on his own. Reason for the thing is, according to the sponsor, that Michael West became too popular with listeners to be confined in just a minor role in "Big Sister."

"Big Sister" is to be heard now at 11:15 a. m., to make room for the dramatic newcomer.

Durable Damsels Take Prize In Week's Delirious Doings

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 24.—You had to be fast on your feet if you wanted to rob any banks last week.

A bank bandit in Bowie, Tex., was pursued for three blocks by the bank president, the cashier and the assistant cashier before he got away . . .

And a girl clerk in a San Francisco grocery store chased a holdup man for five blocks and finally caught him.

The ladies really distinguished themselves in durability during the week. A Newark, N. J., woman plunged out of a third-story window, landed in a baby carriage, and walked off unhurt.

Post-Hit

A Chicago courthouse attendant got used a little more roughly. He was sliding down a spiral mail chute to dislodge a traffic jam when somebody dumped five bags of mail on him.

The mail business seems to have its hazards. A Brooklyn letter carrier got kicked by a customer because a letter came late . . . and delegates to a rural letter carriers' convention in Columbus, Ohio, reported that their duties included, besides delivering mail, helping to deliver calves and listening at length to local gossip . . .

And in the good-turn sweepstakes you'd have to include the 165th Infantry, which paused in its maneuvers outside Prescott, Ark., to let a farm woman call a grocery order to her husband in town over the company radio . . .

The national convention of fire chiefs, seemingly less harassed than the mail men, voted Marlene Dietrich the lady they'd most like to rescue in a fire. . . .

And that brings us to the weekly reverse-English rodeo—

A burglar tapped the Cheraw (S. C.) police station for $140. . . .

The Michigan peach carnival selected as queen a girl who is allergic to peaches . . . A car in a collision in Philadelphia spilled out a lot of cards reading: "Plan ahead for the next time you have trouble on the road . . . and—

A McKeesport (Pa.) political candidate discovered that 20,000 campaign match books he had ordered bore the picture of his opponent.

Mrs. Matthews To Be Buried In Milford, Dle.

Mary Stuart Lasselle Matthews, 88, died yesterday afternoon at her home, 1302 Madison Street Northwest, after a long illness. Funeral services and burial will be at Milford, Del., at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Mrs. Matthews was born in Milford, but had lived in Washington for more than 50 years. She was formerly active in the Women's Relief Corps and the Order of the Eastern Star until ill health caused her retirement from the organizations.

She leaves her husband, Charles E. Matthews, retired Postoffice Department superintendent.

Federal Workers To Fete Colleague

Miss Corbett has been working in the general files section of the board for about five years, and was with other Government agencies previously. She lives at 1940 Biltmore Street Northwest.
